Nazis Relax Mass Raids on Britain, Resort to Sniping

Lone Plane Zooms Down on London And Guns Streets; Others Turned Back

The War Today

GERMAN AIRMEN continue raids on Britain, but scattered attacks do little damage, lack force of fierce massed attacks of September.

R. A. F. COUNTER-OFFENSIVE continues with new raids on Berlin, German industrial areas and "Big Berthas" on the French coast.

Sting Is Lacking

Copyright by New York Times

London (Wednesday), Oct. 2. German airmen raided Britain seven times yesterday.

They showed up at breakfast time, returned for lunch, tea and dinner and remained, as usual, most of the night, but there was something different about these raids. They did not have the sting of those fierce massed September attacks. For reasons known best to Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering, not a single formation even tried to get through to the heart of London.

Similarly, in the early hours of this morning the capital was ominously quiet. From time to time a heavy bomber droned around the city and now and then the concussion of big antiaircraft guns knocked down plaster, but compared to the last three weeks this was definitely a holiday. The all-clear signal even sounded briefly before midnight.

Yesterday started with an exciting incident. Shortly after dawn a big Junkers bomber swooped out of the skies right in the heart of the busy section of the city. The pilot dropped down to about 200 feet and machine-gunned a railroad train standing in the station. Seeing a car backing out of a garage, he dropped down again and took pot shots at that. In the next street he plastered a solitary milk wagon and then, having served as an alarm

R. A. F. Blasts 'Big Berthas'

By the Associated Press

London, Oct. 1.—A new and heavy assault on the "Big Berthas" that crowd the German-held French coastline was opened late tonight by British bombers half hidden in clouds overhanging the English Channel.

Both sides of the Dover Strait trembled under the shock of exploding bombs. The center of the British attack was the region of Boulogne and of the Nazi big-gun emplacements near Cap Griz Nez.

German searchlights threw up lanes of creeping white, and German antiaircraft batteries filled the air with shrapnel and multicolored shell bursts. Tracer shells and parachute flares threw out their brief illuminations.

Radio stations in Hamburg, Bremen and other German cities fell silent, without explanation, before the usual hour of sign off, and it thus appeared that British raiders were over many areas of the Reich.

[The New York Times said air raid sirens sent Berliners to the

Willkie Loses 2 States, Gains In Nebraska

Drops Massachusetts And New Hampshire

By Dr. George Gallup
Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 1.—Massachusetts and New Hampshire, with 17 and 4 electoral votes, respectively, went into the Democratic column in the latest survey, while sentiment for Wendell L. Willkie increased in Nebraska to give the Republicans a substantial lead there. Nebraska has 7 electoral votes.

The gain in Willkie strength in Nebraska was recorded even before the Republican nominee entered the State last week to make his farm speech at Omaha.

Massachusetts had been in the Republican column continuously since early August. New Hampshire had been for Willkie in mid-September, poll results at that time showed.

The results of the latest Institute poll, reflecting sentiment during the first week of Willkie's Western tour, show a four-point Republican gain in Nebraska since mid-September. The rise came just before Nebraska's famed independent Senator, George W. Nor-

U. S. Planes Give British Fresh Hope

Ships From America 'Equal to Our Best,' Lord Beaverbrook Says

American aid in the form of fighting airplanes is contributing to British confidence in ultimate victory over the Nazi airforce, Lord Beaverbrook, British minister of aircraft production, yesterday told the American people.

Testifying to the importance attached by the British government to American production, the minister transmitted to the British purchasing commission here a statement, saying:

"The ministry of aircraft production states that the flow of airplanes from the United States of America gives us renewed confidence in the triumphant conclusion of our long battle in the air.

"The Brewster Fighter Squadron is in use. It is earning the praise of our finest pilots. The Douglas D.B.7 is also in action and the new Curtiss has arrived.

"These three aircraft are equal to our best machines."

Financial Aid Issue

Meanwhile, the question of financial aid for Britain, contemplated through suspension of Johnson Act provisions forbidding loans or credits to any nation in default on its debts to this country remained a live one.

President Roosevelt was asked at his press conference yesterday for comment on The Post's story yesterday to the effect that the suggestion is being discussed with favor in official circles.

He replied that he had not heard of it, and added that he had made

Gov. Lehman 'Malicious,' Willkie Says

(Willkie Text, Page 8.)

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Aboard the Willkie Special, Oct. 1.—Wendell L. Willkie tonight accused Gov. Herbert Lehman, of New York, of making "false, malicious and subversive" innuendoes in declaring that Hitler, Mussolini and Stalin would gain satisfaction from Roosevelt's defeat. Quoting from a speech by the New York Governor yesterday, Willkie demanded that Lehman "make it clear at once and without equivocation that he did not intend, and does not intend, to impute to me any other attitude than that of a defender of democracy."

Willkie said he was "shocked" that Lehman would "stoop to that kind of politics." He recalled that former Secretary of Agriculture Wallace had employed that "line of talk" before, but later had corrected it.

Willkie repeatedly has attacked the European dictators and his position on aid to Britain has paralleled that of the President.

"Colossal Cynicism"

In his speech in Detroit last night he stressed the "precious" qualities of democracy, and attacked the "colossal cynicism" of Adolf Hitler. He said Hitler attained his end by breaking promises, murdering associates, converting "the youth of Germany to highly trained gangsters, and by laying waste to peaceful lands that lie across his path."

Earlier today Willkie carried his pledges of "jobs, jobs and more jobs" to the workers of closely contested, industrial Michigan.

He zig-zagged in and out of hostile territory, paying little heed to warnings of "trouble." At former "sitdown" and "labor holiday" automobile centers he spoke. He was cheered by a throng of 30,000 at Republican Grand Rapids, furniture industry center.

Always his message was the same: Need of jobs was America's basic ill, and that he knew how to provide them.

The New Deal had failed and had stopped talking about jobs.

Society Woman Agrees to Avoid New York and Jail

New York, Oct. 1 (INS).—Mrs. Janet Place Knight, 23, Philadelphia society figure, escaped punishment on a petty larceny charge today by promising life-long self-banishment from New York.

In suspending sentence after Mrs. Knight pleaded guilty, promised to make restitution of about $500 obtained from department stores on forged checks, and said she would never return to New York if spared sentence, the judge said:

"You are a pampered girl who has no responsibilities."

Mrs. Knight, a tall brunette, wept as she heard her probation report read. It recorded that she eloped in 1937 with Bruce Lister Knight, a Philadelphia society man now suing her for divorce. It quoted Knight's sister as saying that Mrs. Knight ran up such bills he had to sell his real estate inheritance to meet them.

Cincinnati in a Dither

Derringer and Newsom to Hurl World Series Opener Today

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Cincinnati, Ohio, Oct. 1.—The fast ball of Buck Newsom, backed by the power of the Detroit Tigers, will be pitted against the matchless control and pitching savvy of the Reds' Paul Derringer tomorrow when Cincinnati's Crosley Field again becomes the World Series stage.

That is the opening game's pitching program as finally assured by Detroit Manager Del Baker who until a late hour today was wavering between Newsom and Schoolboy Rowe as his pitching choice. After weighing the potential brilliance of the fast-balling Newsom and the high dependability of the curveballing Rowe, Baker cast his lot with the big brunette from South Carolina.

Manager Bill McKechnie of the Reds had never faltered in his determination to shoot Derringer at the Tigers. The big right hander who won 20 games for the Reds in the pennant race thus was given preference over Bucky Walters, winner of 22 games for Cincinnati.

Official announcement of the pitching choices produced no effect on the betting odds for the first game. Betting commissioners who have made the Tigers 7-to-10 favorites to win the series, rate the open-

Roosevelt Condemns Hurling Of Missiles at Willkie Parades

President Roosevelt yesterday declared he considered it utterly reprehensible that Wendell Willkie had been subjected to such harsh treatment as the hurling of eggs at his procession in Michigan.

He was asked at his press conference whether he had noticed press reports that "a Presidential candidate had been subjected to harsh treatment in Michigan."

Mr. Roosevelt replied that he had not, commenting that the only paper he had read was The Washington Post and that The Post did not carry the story.

[The Post did carry the story, which the President apparently overlooked.—Editor's note.]

Then Mr. Roosevelt added that his secretary, Stephen T. Early, had advised him that eggs had been thrown at the Republican nominee and that a woman employe of the RFC had hurled objects from a window about the time Willkie passed.

(Last night a stone was thrown through a window in the Willkie train, three cars away from the nominee, and flying glass cut the hands of William C. Murphy of the Philadelphia Inquirer.)

The President said he supposed that under the laws of nearly all States such action constituted assault, a crime.

He added that the RFC employe should forfeit her employment for her actions.

(In Detroit, the woman, Doris M. LaRoue, said: "I am not going back to my job—they won't have a chance to fire me.")

Lost Pilot Shouts Inquiry, Dies As Plane Plummets 50 Feet

A 24-year-old student pilot—John Gormley, of Lancaster, Pa.—training for a flying berth in the national defense program, was killed yesterday when he lost his way from Congressional Airport and crashed on a farm in Loudoun County, Va., about 20 miles from Washington.

JOHN GORMLEY
Student Flier Killed in Crash

Gormley, one of the country's young enrollees for civil pilot training, took off from Congressional Airport on the Rockville pike about 8:15 a .m. He was flying a light Waco biplane recently purchased by the airport for $10,000 and was to complete some final tests in acrobatic work.

Soon after the take-off, his plane was seen circling over the farm of Mrs. Wilson Compton on the Virginia side of the Potomac across from Seneca, Md. According to Ralph Dennis, a farm hand, the ship swooped low over a field, Gormley throttled down his motor and called:

"Which way to the airport?"

As Dennis pointed in the direction of Washington, the craft suddenly hurtled earthward from a height of about 50 feet. The nose of the ship buried itself in the ground and the motor was torn out and hurled several hun-

Clouds Eclipse Sun's Blackout As Thousands Are Spent in Vain

Five minutes of cloudy weather above Patos, Brazil, yesterday thwarted an expedition costing several thousand dollars and more than a month of intensive preparation by five Washington scientists.

The expedition which left in August to observe a total eclipse yesterday over a portion of South America, had set up 15,000 pounds of equipment, much of it on specially constructed concrete bases. All but the radio apparatus was useless when a heavy layer of clouds blanketed the sky.

Dr. Irvine C. Gardner, of the Bureau of Standards, headed the group and was to have supervised its battery of cameras. Other members of the expedition were Dr. E. O. Hulbert, of the Naval Research Laboratory; Dr. Paul A. McNally, director of the Georgetown College observatory; Dr. Carl C. Kiess, spectroscopist of the Bureau of Standards; Dr. Theodore R. Gilliland, radio research specialist of the bureau, and Richard H. Stewart, National Geographic staff photographer.

Draft Boards To Go Easy On Husbands

Deferment Rights Of Married to Be Stretched to Limit, O'Kelliher Promises

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Selective service officials yesterday declared the provisions of the Conscription Act dealing with deferment of men with dependents were "entirely too strict" and predicted that hardships wrought by it will bring a public demand for a change.

Lieut. Col. Victor J. O'Kelliher, member of the draft committee and its legal chief, said that to alleviate the situation as far as possible, conscription regulations soon to be issued will "strain the dependency clause as far as possible without going contrary to the law" and that local boards will be urged to be as liberal as they can in deterring married men.

The law defines a dependent as "only an individual (1) who is dependent in fact on such person for support in a reasonable manner, and (2) whose support in such a manner depends on income earned by such person in a business, occupation or employment."

Not Needed Now

Col. O'Kelliher said that a rigid interpretation of the law by local boards might result in the drafting of men whose wives or children are partially but not entirely dependent upon them. Such action in peacetime with the large pool of men available would work unnecessary hardships, the draft committee feels.

Meanwhile the Senate confirmed President Roosevelt's appointment of 29 major generals and 81 brigadier generals, and an appropriations subcommittee approved a bill carrying funds for a peacetime Army of 1,399,441 men.

Chairman Adams of the subcommittee said it added from $10,000,000 to $12,000,000 to the supplemental defense measure, which carried $1,469,993,636 in cash and contractual authority as it came from the House. The full Appropriations Committee will consider the bill tomorrow.

D. C. Committee Honors Kennedy, Bewails Its Lot

The House District Committee yesterday agreed that legislative work for the National Capital is a pain in the neck and a short cut to political suicide. A dissenting opinion was rendered by Representative D'Alesandro (Democrat), of Maryland.

The occasion was a special meeting to pay tribute to Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, who was defeated for renomination. Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, recited the majority decision from memory.

"Service on the District Committee is a thankless job," he said, "and its members are subject to severe criticism—sometimes vitriolic—from local citizens and the newspapers."

D'Alesandro dissented, "I don't think being a member of the House District Committee hurts anyone", he said as his colleagues looked pained. "It certainly helped me."

3 Families Found to Rule Billions

Rockefellers, duPonts, Mellons Studied

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

A secret Government report, just completed, finds that the duPont, Mellon and Rockefeller families control a huge share of America's industrial wealth through concentration of their holdings, The Post learned yesterday.

The Securities and Exchange Commission has just completed a confidential study of this country's industrial empires which shows that the duPont, Mellon and Rockefeller families have total holdings of $1,353,000,000 in the Nation's 200 largest nonfinancial corporations.

The study, of which only a few copies have been privately distributed, finds that ownership of the Nation's 200 largest nonfinancial corporations is highly concentrated in the hands of a few persons and that the multi-millionaire duPont, Mellon and Rockefeller dynasties are by far the most powerful among this small circle controling America's industry.

The study asserts that 60 per cent of the common stock of these 200 leading corporations is in the con-

Civil Service Bill Extended To Deputies

Conferees Agree To Include Marshals', Collectors' Assistants

Deputy United States marshals and deputy collectors of internal revenue will be made subject to the provisions of the Ramspeck Civil Service Bill, House and Senate conferees tentatively decided yesterday.

The joint conference to iron out differences between the Senate and the House versions of the bill also agreed—subject to formal approval today—to elimination of the highly controversial Keller-Nichols amendment.

(The Keller-Nichols proposal would have prevented positions brought into the merit system through the Ramspeck Bill from being filled by residents of States which have exceeded their quota, as long as any States remained under their quota. It would have had the effect of withholding these jobs from persons from over quota regions such as the District, Virginia and Maryland.)

To Take Effect Sooner

The conferees decided to make the bill effective as soon as it becomes law, instead of on April 15, 1941, as a Senate amendment provided.

Although they agreed to restore deputy marshals and collectors to the bill, the conferees retained other exemptions demanded by the Senate: Assistant United States district attorneys, positions filled by appointment of the President with Senate confirmation, and all posts in the Tennessee Valley Authority. Sparse Senate, House Approve Measure Amid Predictions Of Its Replacement

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

Both House and Senate yesterday approved the final form of the second revenue bill of 1940 and sent the complex and disputed measure to the White House.

Acceptance of the conference report on the bill—which will raise perhaps $400,000,000 net for the current year—meant that one of the last major items on the legislative calendar had been disposal of. Completion of all "must" business by Saturday night still appeared possible.

The tax bill received its official Congressional blessing only after members in both houses had denounced it as a "makeshift," an "imponderable mess" and an "atrocity."

May Never Take Effect

It was freely predicted that a new revenue measure would have to be enacted early in the next session of Congress and one member urged his colleagues not to "worry too much about the details of this bill as most of it will very probably not be in operation at all."

Besides its revenue features, raising the normal corporation rate to 24 per cent for firms earning over $25,000 and imposing excess-profits taxes up to 50 per cent, the measure carries with it provisions demanded by the Advisory Defense Commission for speeding up the national defense program.

This part of the bill—which furnished the impetus for whatever speed was shown by Congress—suspends profit limitations on airplane and warship contracts, and permits unusually rapid deductions of the cost of new defense plants from corporate taxable incomes.

Vandenberg's Lone "No"

The bill also establishes low-rate Government life insurance for conscripts and other members of the armed forces.

In its final shape, the measure is very much milder toward large-income corporations than the type of bill desired by the Treasury Department. But, especially because

Shipyard Plots Told to Dies

By the Associated Press

Newark, N. J., Oct. 1.—Walter M. Appleby, of Media, Pa., presented to a Dies subcommittee today accounts of what he termed sabotage and Communist-Nazi cooperation at the Sun Shipbuilding & Drydock Co. plant in Chester, Pa.

The first witness at hearings of the House un-American activities group in Newark, Appleby told of three "definite cases of sabotage" and of three fires from undeterminable causes at the shipyard within recent months. He identified himself as a marine chemist and secretary of the Sun Ship Employes Association, an independent union representing 6,000 of 7,000 workers.

He said in one "particularly dangerous" incident a ship might have blown up had not workers discovered 63 slashes in hose carrying oxygen and acetylene to welders throughout the yard. The cuts, so nearly through that additional strain would have caused leaks, had been made with a razor blade, Appleby charged.

G. Wilhelm Kunze, national fuehrer of the German-American Bund, estimated before the subcommittee that membership in the organization had been cut in half since August, 1939.

He said the number of units had fallen from 65 to 40 and the number of members from 20,000 to 10,000.

Rumania Expels All Britons In Climax to Oil Sabotage Case

By International News Service

Budapest (Wednesday), Oct. 2.—All British subjects were expelled from Rumania tonight in a sweeping move believed to have been inspired by the Axis powers, according to a dispatch from Bucharest.

Expulsion of the British, of whom there were several hundred in Rumania, followed in the wake of stiff British protests over the arrest of five British subjects by Rumanian police last week.

[The British legation in Bucharest, according to an Associated Press dispatch yesterday, had received a written promise from Gen. Ion Antonescu, Rumanian chief of state, for a "full investigation" of the cases of the five Britons who had been held for seven days by the Rumanian secret police. The five were reported to have been arrested on charges of planning sabotage of oil fields.]

Meanwhile a dispatch from Bucharest said 12 Rumanian policemen were assassinated by a band of green-shirted Iron Guardists tonight in Galatz.

The police officers had been arrested recently and interned in a hotel under an armed guard.

According to the dispatch, the Iron Guardists raided the hotel, disarmed the guard and lined up the officers in the lobby where they were shot to death.

[It was announced recently that a number of Rumanian policemen accused by the Iron Guard of having participated in the alleged assassination of Ion Codreanu, Iron Guard leader, in 1938, had been placed under arrest. It was believed possible that these were the officers slain tonight.]

9 Latin-American Generals Drink Toast Here to Peace

Military commanders of nine Latin American republics stood with the chief of staff of the United States Army last night and drank a toast "to the Western Hemisphere and to the peace which we may not fully appreciate but which we shall do our best to maintain."

The commanders, guests at a Mayflower Hotel dinner of the chief of staff, Gen. George C. Marshall, a few hours before, received from President Roosevelt, commander in chief of the United States military forces, the classic old pledge of soldierly solidarity—"one for all and all for one."

The President met the 20 Latin-American chiefs of staffs and other high-ranking officials, in Washington to start an inspection of United States defenses, in his executive office. He greeted each of them with a handshake and then listened as Gen. Felipe Rivera, of Bolivia, declared the visit would forge "another link on the chain of cordiality and happy relations between our countries, which must produce the assurance of the continuation of our ideal and our capabilities of defending them."

In his response, Mr. Roosevelt quoted the pledge by which the characters of Dumas' classic "Three Musketeers" swore to die, if necessary, for each other. The President said:

"We all have one common problem and that is the defense of the Americas. We have an expression which is common to all the 21 republics—'one for all and all for one.'"

Gen. Marshall proposed the toast to Western Hemisphere peace at the close of his dinner, which ended a of the defense provisions, it was thought highly unlikely that the President would fail to affix his signature.

Profits Tax Bill Sent To White House

Conference Report Quickly Approved In Senate, House

The House accepted the conference report at 12:30 p. m. by voice vote—with only one or two audible "noes." Less than two hours later the report was brought before the Senate; and at 3:32 p. m., with about 20 Senators on the floor, voice approval was given despite a loud "no" by Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan.

Explaining the measure to the 100 House members who were present, Representative Cooper (Democrat), of Tennessee, chairman of the Ways and Means tax subcommittee, said that the net yield from the bill for the current year would be from $340,000,000 to $435,000,000. Estimates for next year and thereafter are twice as high.

Predicting that a new revenue measure would be necessary "very soon after the Seventy-seventh Congress meets," Representative Treadway, of Massachusetts, ranking Republican on the Ways and Means Committee, wryly suggested that the bill would "set up a new class of millionaires."

The measure is so complicated, he said, that "any man who says he can explain this bill would become a millionaire overnight." He added that "'his is only the entering wedge of the most extravagant line of taxation that this country or any other country has ever known."

George's Ire roused

In the Senate the bill aroused still hotter comments. One of the Democratic conferees, Senator George, of Georgia, declared that "there is no possible justification in an excess-profits bill for taxing earnings that are purely normal."

The House refused to accept his proposal to alter the method of imposing excess-profits rates elicited from Senator George the comment that the present method is "one of the most unsound, one of the most inequitable, one of the most indefensible provisions ever written into a harsh bill like the excess-profits bill." His amendment, which would have benefited large businesses, was killed "solely with the purpose of taring bigness according to somebody's idea of bigness," stormed the Georgian.

"An imponderable mess perpetrated on the American businessman —a tax atrocity," was Senator Vandenberg's description of the bill. He said the measure was neither an excess-profits nor a war-profits law and "not even a revenue bill."

Senator Vandenberg declared that the bill uses the "pious excuse" of excess-profit taxation "to reach into normal profits," that the bill "does not even remotely reach into the areas that are going to produce war millionaires," and that "this year's two revenue bills won't produce over $1,000,000,000, and this year's deficit will be over $10,000,000,000."

Regretting the conferees' action in knocking out his war-profits tax bill, Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, urged Congress to adopt his proposal "in advance of a state of war rather than wait until war exists." He added that, in respect to income and outgo, the Nation "is now in a state comparable to a state of war."

contrast to 36 months heretofore. The speed-up has been partially made possible by discontinuing a former practice of making changes in design after construction started.

Three Governors of Midwestern States representing nine such Commonwealths talked with the President about decentralization of defense industries throughout the country. Afterwards, Mr. Roosevelt said the Government's policy was to locate new arms plants away from the seaboard unless delays would result by the action.

The War Department ordered a bombardment squadron, a pursuit squadron, artillery and miscellaneous units to Alaska to strengthen the garrison at the new air base at Anchorage. At the same time, the Army awarded a $37,462,121 contract to the Douglas Aircraft Co. for an undisclosed number of airplanes.

Optical Exports Restricted

By Presidential proclamation, the export of fire control instruments, military searchlights, aerial cameras and other military equipment containing optical material was prohibited except under Government license.

During the day, selective service officials also disclosed that a number of Government departments had asked that whole groups of employes be deferred from the draft, and that they have been informed that this cannot be done under the law. Deferments are all on an individual basis as decided by local boards, it was said.

Col. O'Kelliher, in discussing the problem of deferment of dependents, declared that "support is not entirely a matter of finances."

Some Special Cases

"Take the case of a widower with small children who have an income from a trust fund. In time of peace, with a large number of men available, is it a good thing to take away those children's only parent?

"Or how about the case of a young couple who are both working, who are buying a home and have other commitments. Is it a good thing for the country to call this man, when it might cause them to lose their home, on the ground the wife can get an apartment or move into a boarding house?

"There will be about 5,000,000 men available for military service exclusive of married men and after all deferments and exemptions of workers important to industry and the physically unfit are made. With only 800,000 men to be called the first year, local boards can be very liberal in interpreting the dependent's clause."

Meanwhile, selective service headquarters made public a message which will go to every man who registers October 16, declaring that "each of us must willingly do his bit if we are to hold fast our heritage of freedom and our American way of life—our national existence itself."

The message will be the foreword of a pamphlet which will be issued to all registrants.

Civil Service Acts to Speed Recruiting of Defense Workers

The Civil Service Commission moved yesterday to step up the tempo of its recruitment of skilled workers for the Federal Government's national defense plants, a move that in Washington can only be reflected in a higher rate of Federal pay roll increase.

While Commissioner Arthur W. Flemming told the Civil Service Assembly of the United States and Canada at a convention in Cleveland that the commission must fill more than 200,000 defense positions by next June, the commission in Washington distributed representatives throughout the country an exhortation to redouble recruiting efforts.

The exhortation was contained in the commission's regular letter to its field secretaries and was captioned: "The Challenge of 1940."

Cites Need for Workers

After citing the country's vital need for skilled manpower, the letter told local representatives not to wait for inquiries but to go out and bring in workers.

"A local representative who merely waits for visitors to come in and inquire about these positions is not doing his full duty," the commission declared. "The local representatives will not have done their full job until they assure themselves that there are no sources of supply in their community which have not been tapped."

Written in the tone of "pep" letters used by business firms to exhort salesmen to greater efforts, the commission stressed as "great" the responsibility of those of its 5,000 agents stationed in industrial areas.

The letter cited "many evidences of personal initiative" on the part of its agents and implied that failure to use all means available to produce results would not be tolerated. It called attention to failure of some agents to arrange for the display of "men wanted" posters recently distributed.

The drive to recruit defense workers is being reflected in Washington in steadily increasing employment in agencies concerned.

Commission spokesmen said no employment figures were available for Washington beyond the last civil service report, but pointed to a statement contained in another portion of the letter indicating almost a three-fold increase in requests from departments for certification of eligibles.

27,200 Eligibles Listed

In August, the commisison reported, the certification division furnished 3,020 certificates bearing the names of 27,200 eligibles as compared with 1,379 certificates issued in January with 11,166 names.

Defense recruits are now being placed at the rate of "several thousand" a week with 100,000 workers already hired, the commission said in reporting War and Navy officials "well pleased" with its performance.

For defense plants, arsenals and navy yards scattered over the country, the commission is emphasizing the necessity of applicants meetng the specific requirements of its jobs.

House Defeats Measure Barring Captured Goods

By the Associated Press

The House yesterday defeated legislation approved by the State Department which would have empowered the President to bar from this country any goods confiscated by foreign nations "by force" and without "just compensation." The vote was 123 to 129.

The measure would have permitted the President to exclude oil from expropriated Mexican wells.

Labor Laws Rule Army, Navy Contracts

Bethlehem Steel Assures Hillman It Is Complying

The War and Navy Departments are requiring compliance with Federal labor legislation on the part of all concerns negotiating defense contracts with the Government, the National Defense Advisory Commission announced yesterday.

Sidney Hillman, labor member of the defense commission, made the statement during a press conference in which he said he had been assured by the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, now threatened with a general strike for alleged labor discrimination, that it is complying and will comply with the Wagner Act and other labor laws.

The steel concern now holds more than $1,000,000,000 worth of defense contracts. Hillman expressed no opinion as to the truth of the company's contention or the charges of the C. I. O. Steel Workers Organizing Committee, but he repeated several times that "no negotiated defense contracts will be awarded to any firm which is in violation of any laws affecting labor."

In Touch With Sides

Hillman said he was "in touch" with both the Bethlehem Steel management and the union, but declined to discuss the threatened strike. John L. Lewis, C. I. O. president, and the steel union leaders are conferring tomorrow in Pittsburgh on the Bethlehem case.

Letters from Secretary of the Navy Knox and Assistant Secretary of War Patterson made public yesterday by Hillman, asserted that the principles laid down in President Roosevelt's message to Congress September 13 are now in force in all contract negotiations.

The executive message specifically named the Wagner, Walsh-Healey and the Wages and Hours Acts in setting out the requirement for compliance with Federal, State and local statutes.

Hillman said yesterday he expects to receive this week from Attorney General Jackson an opinion as to whether any firm can be considered to stand in violation of the Wagner Act while it has pending in the courts an appeal from a Labor Board ruling.

Government Given Broad Powers

He said the Justice Department is also preparing an opinion on the right of the War and Navy departments to enforce compliance with labor legislation on the part of firms which negotiated defense contracts prior to the President's statement of principles last month.

Hillman pointed out that recent legislation has given the Government broad powers to negotiate contracts instead of merely advertising for bids.

"We are looking for steady and substantial reemployment in the next few months," Hillman added.

National Income Is Ahead of 1939, Jones Reports

Secretary of Commerce Jones estimated yesterday that the national income in the first eight months of 1940 was $2,400,000,000 more than in the similar period last year.

In a statement, he estimated the figure at $47,400,000,000 and said that if the same rate continued during the last four months, income for the full year 1940 might be $73,000,000,000, the highest since 1930.

A large part of the income increase was classified as salaries and wages, which totaled $30,370,000,000 in the first eight months of this year, compared with $28,976,000,000 in the similar period last year.

British Take 2 Tons Of Mail Off Clipper

New York, Oct. 1 (AP).—The Dixie Clipper, which left Lisbon yesterday, arrived at LaGuardia Field this afternoon with five passengers and 2,500 pounds of mail.

Most of the original 17 on the passenger list left the plane at Horta, Azores, and British censors removed 2 tons of mail at Bermuda, the largest amount seized since censorship was inaugurated last January. Because of bad weather, it was the first clipper arrival at New York in ten days.

Army Recalls Col. Ayres To Duty Here

AYRES

Cleveland, Oct. 1 (AP).—Col. Leonard P. Ayres, who recently declared preparedness was "decidedly leisurely" compared with 1917, got a chance today to help speed things up.

The Army recalled the Cleveland economist to his World War position as chief statistical officer. Col. Ayres said he would work "almost entirely on the progress of procurement under contracts" when he returns to duty in Washington about October 7.

The Cleveland Trust Co., whose bulletin Col. Ayres has edited since he joined as vice president in 1920, gave him a leave of absence.

Miami, Fla., Oct. 1 (AP).—Rear Admiral John W. Greenslade, remarking that "things are moving fast," led a joint Army-Navy mission here today on the way to an inspection tour of prospective naval and air bases in British Caribbean possessions.

The eight-member mission, accompanied by three aides, flew here from Washington today in two Army transports and will leave tomorrow morning for Nassau, capital of the Bahamas.

The rear admiral said of reports that the Duke of Windsor, governor of the Bahamas, might accompany the mission from Nassau:

"If he wants to go along with us for the trip, we would be glad to have him. I understood a British commission was to collaborate with us, but things are moving so fast that I am not sure that part of it will be carried out."

La Paz, Bolivia, Oct. 1 (AP).—Bolivian tin producers expressed the hope today that current negotiations in the United States soon would open a long-sought market for this country's slumping tin industry.

Three of Bolivia's biggest tin magnates, Carlos Aramayo, Simon Patino and Mauricio Hochschild, are conferring with American officials now on plans to establish smelting plants for the United States defense program.

Communications have become increasingly difficult with Britain, Bolivia's biggest tin customer.

4 Persons Held In Mystery Death Of Man Here

A man and three women, all colored, were held by police last night in connection with the death of Cornelius R. King, 36, of Silver Hill, Md., whose body was found in an alley behind the 400 block of G place northwest early yesterday.

Cause of King's death had not been determined last night. An autopsy was performed, but Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald ordered additional chemical tests.

An employe of the Sewer Division, PWA, King was found by Policemen Raymond E. Maust and Wilford P. Helsel, First Precinct, when they drove through the alley in a scout car.

The dead man's watch and wallet were found in possession of the colored man. The three women, police said, were arrested after it was learned King had been seen in their house.

120 Approved For D. C. Draft Board Service

Gen. Cox Will Submit Names for Key Posts To Commissioners

More than 120 Washingtonians will be recommended to the commissioners tomorrow morning for appointment to 24 local selection boards—heart of the District conscription setup.

Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, Washington selective service executive, said he would submit his recommendations for the key draft posts at a conference beginning at 10 a. m. at the District Building.

At least five persons will be recommended for the three-man boards in each of the 24 registration areas and in some of the more congested precincts he will name as many as nine potential appointees, the draft head said.

Must Be Residents of Areas

Appointment of the 72 board members will follow a weeding-out process designed to select those most qualified to exercise the great discretionary powers implicit in the selection phase of conscription.

Members must be residents of the area where the boards on which they serve are located, according to the "neighborhood psychology" theory of the seletcive service setup. The plan assumes that members will be qualified to decide deferment questions because they are neighbors of registrants. At the same time they are expected not to show too great leniency because of natural anxiety that their communities make a good showing in contributing residents to the draft.

In deciding borderline deferment cases—for reasons of physical incapacity, dependence or employment in vital industries—boards will be assisted by lawyers and physicians assigned to each area. In addition, there will be a Government appeal agent to protect the Government's rights in questions of classification.

60 Lawyers' Names Submitted

Certain to fill some of these volunteer posts are approximately 60 District Bar Association members whose names were submitted yesterday to Gen. Cox. The lawyers announced they were willing to serve in any capacity in which they might be required but it is expected they will be assigned to positions in which they will decide legal technicalities incident to registration and selection.

At the same time the District Medical Society announced it had more than doubled the membership of its medical resources committee, in charge of supplying physicians for preliminary physical examinations for registrants and solution of medical problems in connection with the draft.

D. C. to Send Five To Labor Parley

The Commissioners yesterday named five persons to represent the District at the seventh conference on labor legislation, which will be held here November 12, 13, and 14.

Named were Mrs. William Kittle, chairman, and Miss Eunice Broyles, executive secretary of the District Minimum Wage Board; John Locher, president of the Central Labor Union; Guy Pearson, chief clerk of the Engineer Department of the District, and Robert M. Buck, former president of the Washington Newspaper Guild.

Senators Begin Election Inquiry

'Phantom' Voting, Fund Irregularities Claimed in Delaware

By the Associated Press

Chairman Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, reported a "regular flood of complaints" to the Senate Campaign Investigating Committee yesterday as it opened public hearings here on "alleged voting roll irregularities" in Wilmington, Del.

Gillette said "scores of complaints" being received by the committee would be passed upon at a closed session Friday.

Among these, Gillette said, was a protest against a series of "letters being sent out by an insurance corporation under the title 'Dad to His Son.'"

He said these letters appeared to be a Presidential campaign appeal and as such might come "within the prohibition against campaign contributions by a corporation."

Gillette said committee investigators also were looking into several complaints that persons had received receipts for political contributions they did not make.

Tells of "Phantom Voters"

A story of "phantom voters" who registered from the city dump and "fourth rate" hotels in Wilmington was recounted yesterday to a subcommittee by a Democratic official, but local Republican leaders replied that they had no knowledge of any irregularities.

Edward G. Pollard, secretary of the Democratic city committee, testified that the "Republican-dominated Delaware Legislature" had set up special election machinery for Wilmington and Newcastle County and asserted that the "party which controls the department of elections is able to control the outcome of the elections."

The Republicans who said they knew of no irregularities were H. Eugene Savery, State chairman, and Albert Stetzer, Newcastle County recorder of deeds and chairman of the county Republican executive committee.

Savery protested against an investigation being conducted by a Federal body.

Holds State Laws Ample

When Senator Reed (Republican), of Kansas, a committee member, commented that "testimony and reports of investigators" showed that "certain names ought not to be there," Savery replied that State laws contained "ample power" to remove illegal voters from the lists.

George J. Shillito, special investigator for the campaign committee, said that a "house-to-house" check-up of registered voters in "sample" districts failed to locate 94 of 228 voters in one area and 130 of 242 in another.

Shillito added that 37 voters were registered from a single address, "a fourth-rate hotel." The hotel proprietor, he declared, had said that not more than five of these were qualified.

The investigator said he had been able to find a few of the others in the county jail and "hobo jungles."

McNary to Introduce Willkie in Pittsburgh Before Western Trip

Senator McNary, of Oregon, the Republican Vice Presidential nominee, said yesterday that he had arranged to speak to a gathering of farmers at Northwood, Iowa, October 7, on a trip that will take him first to Pittsburgh, Pa., tomorrow, and to Ulen, Minn., October 5.

McNARY

McNary said he planned to discuss the farm problem in the Northwood speech. Northwood is in the Congressional district formerly represented by Representative Gilbert N. Haugen, who joined with McNary several years ago in sponsoring the McNary-Haugen farm bill.

At Pittsburgh, the Oregon Senator will introduce Wendell L. Willkie, at a rally at Forbes Field. It will be the first time the two nominees have appeared on the same platform.

Kansas City, Oct. 1 (AP).—Edward J. Flynn, of New York, Democratic national committee chairman, charged Wendell Willkie with "falsifying the record" in a speech today before party leaders from Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma and Nebraska.

The New Yorker said ". . . he (Willkie) charged President Roosevelt is pushing the Nation 'ever closer to war,'" then cited quotations from President Roosevelt's messages and speeches declaring his hatred of war and his hope that this country would not become involved. The National chairman said:

"The Republican panic is evident. The Willkie slump is so apparent that sorrow engulfs all elements of the minority party."

New York, Oct. 1 (AP).—Joseph E. McWilliams, who was defeated two weeks ago in a bid for a Republican Congressional nomination, today was sentenced to 75 days in the workhouse on a disorderly conduct conviction based on an anti-Semetic street speech.

Seven days he spent in the psychiatric ward at Bellevue Hospital were deducted from the sentence.

It was his second conviction following anti-Jewish oratory. The first brought him a $50 fine on July 6.

RFC Worker Held for Attack On Willkieites

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Oct. 1.—A girl autograph hunter, struck on the head by a metal wastebasket as she waited outside a downtown hotel to see Wendell L. Willkie last night, will be discharged from a hospital tomorrow. Earlier reports that her skull was fractured were denied.

The basket was one of several missiles which showered down on the crowd following the Republican Presidential nominee shortly after he had entered the hotel.

The girl was identified as Betty Wilson, 19. A dozen stitches were required to close a scalp laceration.

Tracing the source of the missiles, police arrested a woman who gave her name as Miss Doris La Roue, 31, and said she was an employe of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Paul Wenzel, chief of detectives, quoted Miss La Roue as saying she had hurled the 5-pound metal basket and other objects from her eighteenth-floor room "in a spirit of fun." She was held on a disorderly conduct charge pending the outcome of Miss Wilson's injuries.

Police said a bottle, a wooden chair, a heavy phone book and a bedspread had been hurled from the window. No one else in the crowd ob about 1,000 was injured.

Superiors of Miss La Roue said she had been an RFC employe for about eight years and was one of their most efficient typists.

She told newsmen today that "a Democratic Senator got me my job here," but added: "I am not going back to my job—they won't have a chance to fire me."

Miss La Roue was divorced last February from Fred Miller.

Bureau Predicts Clearing Today, Warm Week-End

The prediction for Middle Atlantic States was for generally fair weather today through Saturday.

"Temperatures below normal Wednesday and Thursday, rising to normal or slightly above by Saturday," the Bureau predicted.

In the daily forecast rain will continue this morning, but is due to end this afternoon, the Weather Bureau predicted last night. Fair and warmer weather is expected tomorrow.

Storm warnings were up along the Eastern Coast from Cape Hatteras to Rhode Island. A disturbance of considerable intensity was centered 250 miles southeast of Block Island, R. I., and heading northeast.

Little damage was reported in yesterday's quarter-inch rain. Yesterday's high was 59; low, 54.

Judge Sought In Shooting of 3 In Detroit Court

Detroit, Oct. 1 (U.P.).—Ralph Nadel, 39, was killed tonight and two brothers were severely wounded in the Wayne (Detroit) County Building.

Police Inspector John Whitman, of the homicide squad said officers were searching for Common Pleas Judge Robert Sage, 53, whom they accused of shooting the men during an argument over court litigation.

Whitman said Sage was discussing a judgment against four lots in Sportsman's Park here with Nadel, Maurice Smiley, 53, and his brother, Alfred Smiley, 39, when the quarrel developed.

He quoted Judge Sage as saying he would be the "pacifier" and at the same time taking out a gun, with which he allegedly shot the three men. Each of the Smileys was wounded in the chest.

Landon Sees War in Plans Of Roosevelt

May Enter Conflict Without Declaration By Congress, He Says

By the United Press

Hastings, Nebr., Oct. 1.—Alf M. Landon charged tonight that President Roosevelt, if reelected, may plunge the United States into war without a formal declaration by Congress.

The 1936 Republican Presidential candidate took the stump here for Wendell L. Willkie at a rally sponsored by the Adams County Republican committee. The audience interrupted him frequently with applause.

The former Kansas Governor, who described Mr. Roosevelt as "a spectacular mercurial glamour boy," asserted that the President, "more than any other Chief Executive in our time, has successfully concealed his plans and intentions from the American people."

Sees No End of "Experiments"

"Therefore," he continued, "no one can be sure what he will do after the November election. We heard a lot in 1936 of the belief that after four years of experimentation the President would settle down to a steady course, if given a second term, only to be met with the Supreme Court packing plan.

"According to distinguished Democratic members of Congress, the President has already asked Congress to do everything but declare war and do everything that was ever done by any Government in any war at any time.'"

Asserting that "events abroad give the New Dealers their great opportunity to make government the master of organized labor, of agriculture and of business," Landon declared that "a dramatic step in that direction was taken by the President himself in proposing to conscript labor—girls as well as boys."

Concentration Camps in Sight

"I have noticed," he continued, "that when the President proposes something like this, he never drops it. Sooner or later he attempts to manipulate things so that it will be necessary to return to his idea. Will we have labor concentration camps for girls as well as boys, if Mr Roosevelt is reelected? In view of his proposal to organize them, it would appear likely."

Landon charged that Mr. Roosevent "wants to dominate world politics, just as he has dominated the Democratic Party, and now seeks to dominate the record of all other Presidents by serving a life term."

Ticket Sales Sped For Polo Match To Benefit Britain

Headquarters of "Bundles for Britain," 1331 Connecticut avenue northwest, looks more like a box office than a workroom this week with members of the Foxcroft Alumnae Association hawking tickets for the All-Star benefit polo match scheduled for Sunday at the Potomac Park polo field.

The ticket committee is composed of Mrs. Samuel F. Beach, Mrs. Walter Chappell and Mrs. Benjamin Thoron. Some 10,000 tickets will be distributed to various hotels and the American Automobile Association, where they will also be on sale.

All proceeds will go to the mobile canteens and mobile surgical units in London.

President Is Silent On Son's Captaincy

President Roosevelt declined yesterday to make a statement on the appointment of his son Elliott to a captaincy in the Air Corps, in the procurement division, and the subsequent criticism led by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, retired.

Mr. Roosevelt said he had read what Gen. Johnson said about Elliott and what Elliott had said about Gen. Johnson, and that he guessed that handled the subject pretty well.

U. S. Oil Suits Termed 'Political'

Philadelphia, Oct. 1 (AP).—J. Howard Pew, president of the Sun Oil Co., termed "political" today a Government suit charging that the American Petroleum Institute and 22 oil companies held monopolistic control of virtually all crude oil available for refining and fixed prices for the industry.

The suit, filed yesterday in Federal District Court, Washington, named Sun Oil among the defendants.

Asserting he had been unable to get a copy of the allegations, Pew said: "It is obvious that the real purpose of this action at this time is political and in line with the known policy of the Administration to create hostility toward business."

Lowell Mellett Named Aide Of Roosevelt

Chief of O. G. R. Will Keep Present Post In Filling New Duties

President Roosevelt yesterday announced appointment of Lowell Mellett, chief of the Office of Government Reports, to be one of his administrative assistants " with a passion for anonymity."

He said Mellett would serve as a general handyman and at the same time would continue at the helm of the reports office.

Mellett was editor of the Washington News from 1921 until 1937, when he resigned to become director of the National Emergency Council, later renamed the Office of Government Reports. Previously he had been a Scripps-Howard newspaper executive and managing editor of Collier's magazine.

He joins Laughlin Currie, William H. McReynolds, James H. Rowe, jr., and Dan Tobin as members of the official family of $10,000 a year administrative assistants authorized in one of the early reorganization plans.

In response to a question, the President said he did not know whether Mellett would handle any matters of press relations.

U.S. Plans to Strengthen Forts

By the Associated Press

There were signs last night that Administration officials would look with suspicion on any French plan to strengthen the fortification of Martinique, French island in the Caribbean.

President Roosevelt cautioned reporters not to print any stories saying that the United States and France were in agreement on fortification of the island.

There was no official word that the Vichy government intended to strengthen Martinique, but official quarters were interested in a news dispatch from Vichy saying that fortification would start in 1941.

The French Ambassador, Gaston Henri-Haye, called on President Roosevelt yesterday. He acknowledged afterward that he had brought up the fortification question, and said he was sure "there was nothing very important that separates the French viewpoint from the American."

trol of 1 per cent of the book shareholders.

For most of the corporations—all holding a commanding place in American industry—less than 2 per cent of the common shareholdings of record constituted a majority of all common stock outstanding.

The report, which has not yet been published, was prepared by SEC experts for submission to the Temporary National Economic (Monopoly) Committee.

In most large corporations, the study reveals, not much over 1 per cent of the holders is required in most cases to account for the majority of the stock outstanding or for voting control.

Worth $33,000,000,000

The 200 corporations which were included in the study represent between two-fifths and one-half of the assets, dividends, shareholdings and stockholders of all nonfinancial domestic corporations.

The market value of their common and preferred stock issues amounted in 1937 to about $33,000,000,000 and their total assets to abont $70,000,000,000.

The one-fourth of 1 per cent of holders who had more than 5,000 shares each own 48.4 per cent of all the common stock in these key corporations, the study found.

Further, it was discovered that officers and directors of these industrial giants held over 38,000,000 shares of their stock with a market value of about $2,163,000,000.

Utilities Concentrated

Industrial companies and electric and gas utilities showed the most highly concentrated ownership.

The automobile industry showed the greatest control by the 20 largest shareholdings, due to the close ownership of the Ford Motor Co.

Other industries with similar control by a few persons were lumber and paper, building equipment, chemical, petroleum refining, and rubber and leather.

In the common stock issues of the 200 largest corporations, it was found that owners of the 20 largest shareholdings hold control in one out of three of the corporations.

Held By Families

Only 60 of the 200 corporations examined failed to show a definite center of control and in most cases the control was exerted by a family or group of families acting together.

The study reveals that the duPont empire in these 200 corporations consists mainly of two giant corporations, E. I. duPont de Nemours & Co. and General Motors Corporation, with the United States Rubber Corporation as a minor adjunct.

Mellon family holdings were found to be spread out over more than half a dozen very large, but not giant, corporations.

The Rockefeller empire was described as concentrated in the oil industry.

The total value of the DuPont empire in the 200 corporations examined, the study declared, about $565,000,000. The Mellon empire was valued at about $391,000,000, and the Rockefeller holdings at $397,000,000.

British Malaysia Invasion Hinted

Tokyo, Oct. 1 (INS).—Thinly veiled threats that Japan may invade British Malaysia if the Burma road lifeline of the Chinese armies is reopened appeared in the Japanese press today.

At the same time, Domei, official Japanese news agency, reported that Japanese business firms and bankers in Britain were winding up their affairs preparatory to evacuation.

These developments, and the announcement that the Indo-China dispute had been settled to Japan's satisfaction were taken by diplomatic circles as an indication that Tokyo was ready to turn its diplomatic guns full upon Britain.

WPA is also excluded.

Still undetermined last night was the fate of a Senate amendment to grant temporary employes of the Census Bureau the benefits of the bill, if they have served six months or more. It was indicated, however, that the proposal was not likely to be approved.

The only other major amendment in doubt when the conferees' executive session broke up was a proposal to prevent discrimination against job applicants merely because they did not come from certain schools or colleges.

Both these questions should be resolved at today's meeting of the conference committee.

Though all of its decisions were described as "tentative," the conference hit on a compromise on the proposal of Senator Minton (Democrat), of Indiana, to end the requirement that photographs of jobseekers be submitted to the Civil Service Commission. This amendment, designed primarily to protect colored persons, was modified to allow the commission itself to decide whether it wants photographs or fingerprints.

The conferees agreed on a Senate amendment extending benefits of the bill to clerks of members or standing committees of Congress with four years' experience.

The Ramspeck bill would allow the President to bring some 200,000 Federal employes into the civil service through noncompetitive examinations.

day of sightseeing, official visits and review of troops in the rain at Fort Myer in honor of the Latin Americans.

He preceded the toast with one "to the presidents of our respective republics" and followed it with another to the health of his guests and their safe journey which starts early this morning by air.

As Gen. Marshall finished his second toast the visitrs and top-ranking officers of the United States Army stood at attention around the horseshoe banquet table while the band played the National Anthem.

Marshall Speaks Ex Tempore

The only speeches were made by Gen. Marshall in English and Gen. Rodolfo A. Mendoza, Guatemalan chief of staff.

Marshall said he deliberately avoided making a prepared address because he felt it "more to the point that what I shall say shall be what I feel at this moment."

"You have come at the psychological moment," he declared. "This month we bloom into a rather large military establishment.

"The most difficult thing we have to combat is the physical and geographical difficulty of getting to know one another. These weeks will help us to overcome distance."

"On this trip," the general added, "you will have an opportunity to see more of our military establishment than most of the citizens of our country."

Sitting opposite Gen. Marshall was Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State.

Reporters were told by Gen. Marcelino Bergalli, commanding general of the Uruguayan army, that Nazi influence in his country is "inconsequential." Although Uruguay has lately been reported as being more seriously menaced by the Nazis than any of the Latin American republics, Gen. Bergalli said:

"We have no fears about this for the future. Their power is unimportant."

During his response to Gen. Marshall, Gen. Mendoza expressed gratitude for President Roosevelt's pledge, which he repeated, and congratulated the Army for its progress toward "preservation of our liberties."

Gen. Mendoza remarked on the "brilliant" review at Fort Myer which brought onto the field 1,500 infantry, cavalry and artillery men.

The visiting commanders donned Army raincoats, issued by special orders of Gen. Marshall, and joined him in the reviewing stand. Immediately following the review was a reception in Gen. Marshall's quarters in honor of the visitors and attended by staff officers of the garrison, members of the Latin American Diplomatic Corps and their wives and Federal officials. Mrs. Henry L. Stimson, wife of the Secretary of War, assisted Mrs. Marshall as hostess.

Col. Manuel Rodriguez Torra, of Costa Rica, and Gen. Luis Castaneda, chief of staff of Colombia, commented on the delegation's visit of more than a half hour with the President. "As Mr. Roosevelt said," Col. Torra declared, "we are all determined to fight for defense of our countries, if necessary."

At the War Department, the visitors met Secretary of War Stimson and Gen. Bergalli, with Lieut. Col. Oscar D. Gestido, Uruguayan air corps chief, presented Gen. Marshall with a bronze replica of historic Uruguayan Fort Santa Teresa.

All-Winter Siege Of Britain Seen

Germans Expect Hunger to Break Island's Resistance

By the United Press

Berlin, Oct. 1.—The German high command tacitly admitted tonight that it is resigned to a winter-long siege of Britain with "cyclonic" air assaults but claimed that hunger will stalk among the British people to break down their resistance.

A spokesman of the high command's economic section asserted, as official reports told of punishing bombing attacks on the London area and an airdrome on the west coast of Scotland, that "general hunger will march against England herself."

At the same time Germany called on Russia and the United States, through one of her most authoritative organs, to announce their "final positions" in the European war either on the side of Great Britain or the Axis powers.

The Hamburger Fremdenblatt accompanied its demand with a prediction that the Soviets will turn their backs on Britain and enter into a new "Euro-Asian power bloc" supplementing the new Italo-German-Japanese military alliance.

This bloc, it was stated, will be directed not only against Britain but against "certain other interventionist circles" seeking to expand the war—a reference to the United States.

Welles Statement Assailed

Germany and Russia late today signed a new railroad agreement providing for regular passenger traffic between Moscow and Berlin over several routes and facilitating shipments of vital supplies to the Reich.

(At the time of the signing of the triple alliance last Friday it was said that under the pact Japan might send war supplies to the Axis powers by way of the Trans-Siberian Railroad.)

Meanwhile, the Boersen Zeitung assailed United States Undersecretary of State Welles for his recent statement that Britain is fighting a defensive battle.

The Boersen Zeitung said Welles should know better as result of his European tour last spring as President Roosevelt's special envoy seeking information concerning the attitude of the belligerents.

"Actually, the Roosevelt Government's policy is aimed at preventing the nations of Europe and Asia from sitting down around a table for a new ordering of their living space," the newspaper said.

This last statement was in reference to a July 11 statement by Stephen Early, President Roosevelt's secretary, advocating a Monroe Doctrine for all all continents.

Berlin, Oct. 1—(AP)—The German air force, day and night, is out to keep London from "catching its breath," an authorized source said tonight in outlining what was described as the three-fold purpose of Germany's aerial offensive against the British Isles.

The other primary aims were stated to be:

Interference with British war production.

Blockading the import of essential goods."

Raids on Britain Become Skirmishes

clock for the neighborhood, he climbed up into a cloud and started home. That was the start of this strange day.

A little while later the usual swarm of high-flying photographers came over in their reconnaissance planes. Such is the development of this air war that nobody pays much attention to them any longer. The boys on the big gun batteries here and there took a few pot shots at them and drove them off. Nobody bothered to sound the sirens.

There were two other morning raids, neither of which bothered London. About 50 bombers and fighters made a circular sweep along the coast, evidently to test British defenses. When British fighters came out to meet them they simply turned out to sea.

Similarly, 50 more came over before noon, heading for London. They had barely reached the coast when a Spitfire patrol came into sight and the bombers turned back.

That is the way it went most of the day. About 40 German planes most of them fighters, swung down the narrows between Dover and Calais at the beginning of the afternoon, looked in and went back without dropping a bomb, though no fighters bothered them. Twice more during the afternoon they did virtually the same thing and then later in the afternoon they tried another stunt.

This time about 50 came over, crossed the coast and then broke up into a dozen small groups and flew across Kent toward London. Some of these succeeded in getting through and dropped a few bombs in the southwest district of the capital. There were several casualties, some of them fatal.

The only real aerial fighting of the day took place over Poole, in Dorsetshire, where a squadron of British fighters attacked a German formation. Altogether, the air ministry said, though single German planes also visited Wales and Liverpool, only four German planes were shot down to three British.

It is difficult to explain the tactics of the Germans. The success of the German military forces in the past has been due partly to the theory that the greatest possible force should be concentrated on one point of attack, but this theory definitely has not been followed in the air attack on this country.

For weeks now the Germans have been dividing their forces and trying to hit a great number of points at the same time. At all points, so far as is known, each daylight raiding force has been attacked and usually driven off by the British fighter command. Still, though Marshal Goering changes his tactics in many details, he has continued to try to raid a great number of points simultaneously.

Neutral air experts are convinced the Germans so far have not used their air power to the best advantage.

As a result the British are recuperating from the first terrible pressure of the blitzkrieg. Rail communications are better now than two weeks ago. Mail service has improved considerably. The production of aircraft is greater than British losses and people are beginning to get their second wind.

no recommendations to that effect and did not expect to.

Nevertheless, the proposal continued to receive consideration of officials and it was plain that further action in that direction is anticipated.

Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, introduced legislation Monday which would exempt Britain from the Johnson Act ban, and at the same time authorize the President to acquire British territory in the Pacific area for American bases.

Senator Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, the majority leader, said it would be impossible to act on the legislation at this session of Congress because it would "provoke a lot of debate."

Some official circles were known to take the view, in that connection, that Congress, in pursuance of the American policy of all possible assistance to Britain short of warfare, might be confronted with the question of whether to send American dollars or American boys.

Senator Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, said committee action on the King proposal would await State Department views. Secretary of State Hull had no comment on the attitude the department would take.

Continuing his urging of all possible material help to the British, Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, said in the Senate yesterday that the recent German-Italian-Japanese mutual assistance pact was a "world-wide squeeze play" designed to "intimidate" this country.

The Nation's answer, he said, should be to "give till it hurts in augmenting the material resources of Great Britain and at the same time redouble preparations for defense."

De Tristan Kidnap Sentence Deferred Until Friday

Redwood City, Calif., Oct. 1 (AP).—The beginning of a life sentence for Wilhelm Muhlenbroich, 40-year-old alien kidnaper of Marc de Tristan, jr., was delayed again today.

Composed and unemotional, but anxious to "get it over with," Muhlenbroich pleaded guilty in Superior Court and asked to be sentenced immediately. Superior Judge Maxwell McNutt said he would defer.

The delay was intended to prevent Muhlenbroich from charging later that he was "railroaded" through the courts.

cellars again but during two and a quarter hours of the alarm's duration they did not hear a single shot fired by the antiaircraft guns. Authoritative quarters said the planes were turned off before reaching the city's outskirts.)

All this was but a resumption of assaults last night and early today upon the vital forces of the German war foundry and the long string of Nazi-held French ports—targets, said the air ministry, of tons of British bombs.

The air ministry said the R. A. F. struck from the far interior of Germany in a long sweep back to the coast, and left blotches of flame from Berlin to Calais.

Five Planes Admitted Lost

It was apparently one of the greatest single efforts yet launched in the ultimate defense of England against the invasion threat, and the loss of five British planes was acknowledged.

Berlin's people were under cover for more than five hours—the longest period yet—and heavy British bombers were declared here actually to have cruised over the Reich's capital for three and a half hours, dropping bombs on the city's vital utilities.

The attack on Berlin, loosed during the night and carried on into this morning, was reported particularly heavy on the West and Klingenberg power stations, and it symbolized perhaps more important assaults upon vital areas not only elsewhere in Germany but in Holland, Belgium and France.

This was the report of the destruction wrought, area by area, as reported by the British air ministry:

In Germany—Oil refineries at Hanover and Leuna, near Leipzig, heavily bombed and great flames left leaping upward; at Rothenburg, an airplane factory hit; at Magdeburg, a munitions plant; freight yards and railway communications bombed at Bremen, Ehrang, Osnabrueck and Mannheim; the docks hit at Cuxhaven.

In Holland—Docks at Amsterdam hard pounded; gasoline dumps attacked at Rotterdam and Vlaardingen; eight explosions reported at an airdrome in Limburg.

In Belgium—The port of Ostend assaulted, shipping and supplies bombed, railway centers and freight yards smashed at in Brussels.

In France—The ports of Dunkerque, Calais, Boulogne, Le Havre and Lorient, already black with the wreckage of many a previous assault, hit yet again.

Dr. Gosling Funeral Set For Tomorrow

Was Former Assistant Superintendent Of District Schools

Funeral services for Dr. Thomas W. Gosling, former assistant superintendent in charge of senior high schools in the District, will be held tomorrow at 3 p. m. at St. Alban's Church. He died unexpectedly at his home in the Westchester Apartments, 4000 Cathedral avenue northwest.

GOSLING

A native of Cincinnati, Dr. Gosling came to Washington in 1934 to act as director of the Junior Red Cross. He left that position to go with the Board of Education, where his appointment as assistant superintendent broke a long-standing tradition of appointments from within the school system.

He was a former president of the executive committee of the National Council of Teachers of English; was first vice president of the Washington Council of Social Agencies and chairman of its committee on recreation, and was an active member of St. Albans Episcopal Church.

Dr. Gosling was a member of the Cosmos, Torch and Rotary Clubs and was a Thirty-second degree Mason.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Emily Elizabeth Tandy Ford Gosling; a son, Arthur Gosling, of Akron, Ohio, and a daughter, Mrs. George Hardy, of Stelton, N. J., both children of his first wife, who died several years ago. He married Mrs. Emily Gosling in September, 1939.

Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Willkie Drops Two States, Poll Shows

ris, enthusiastically indorsed President Roosevelt for a third term.

The trend of sentiment in Nebraska in four consecutive Institute polls, including the latest, is as follows:

"If the Presidential election were held today, would you vote for Roosevelt or for Willkie?"

	Roosevelt	Willkie
Aug. 4	44%	56%
Aug. 25	43	57
Sept. 20	47	53
Today	43	57

Approximately one Nebraska voter in every twelve (8 per cent) was undecided in the latest poll.

With the Willkie campaign centering in the Middle West and Far West in recent weeks, the rise in Nebraska poses the vital question as to how much voting sentiment has been changed by Willkie's barnstorming campaign tour. Will the Nebraska gains be duplicated in other States west of the Mississippi? Further light will be shed on this important question when the complete 48-State returns of the present poll are in. A report on the Far West and Pacific Coast States—the area through which Willkie toured—will be made Friday, and a complete report of the Nation will follow on Sunday.

More than offsetting the Republican gains in Nebraska are important Democratic gains in one of the biggest Eastern States, Massachusetts.

In the latest survey Massachusetts flops over into the Democratic column with a three-point gain in Roosevelt sentiment.

Massachusetts	Roosevelt	Willkie
August 4	46%	54%
August 25	45	55
September 20	49	51
Today	52	48

The proportion of undecided in the survey was 6 per cent.

The Democratic rise in Massachusetts indicates clearly that the Willkie forces cannot afford to neglect their campaign in New England on the ground that this section is reasonable "safe" for the G. O. P. Not only does the poll indicate a G. O. P. loss in Massachusetts, but a loss in New Hampshire as well.

There, in the latest study, a shift of three points in favor of Roosevelt was found by the Institute. Whereas the State was in the Willkie column in mid-September, showing 51 per cent for Willkie and 49 per cent for Roosevelt, today the situation is reversed, with Roosevelt leading by 52 per cent, to 48 per cent for Willkie.

Lost Pilot Dies As Plane Falls

dred feet, Dennis reported.

With P. G. Shafer and William A. Griffin, who were working with him, Dennis pulled Gormley from the twisted wreckage. He was unconscious and remained in a coma until he died shortly before noon in Georgetown Hospital.

The injured youth was taken to the hospital by the Herndon (Va.) Fire Department resque squad, accompanied by Dr. William Meyer, of Herndon. Dr. Meyer said the youth suffered a fractured skull and internal injuries.

Kimball Scribner, chief instructor at Congressional Airport, said Gormley had been taking flying lessons all summer and was a very apt pupil. The youth was in the final stages of his training and already held a private pilot's license, Scribner reported.

Air Reported Very Rough

After a preliminary investigation, inspectors for the Civil Aeronautics Board expressed belief Gormley was attempting to land his ship to obtain further directions when the crash occurred. The air, it was further reported, was "extremely rough" in the area where the young pilot was flying.

Gormley was the son of J. J. Gormley, of Lancaster, a passenger conductor for the Pennsylvania Railroad. For the last six weeks, the youth had been living at Ingleside Inn, adjacent to Congressional Airport.

The accident was the sixth since the civil pilot training program began operations two years ago in which trainees were killed.

DEL RIO GOES MANHATTAN. Top-flight New York floor shows will be on view at Del Rio regularly, beginning October 10, night of the "autumn opening party."

Don Rice will fly from New York's State Theater to head the first revue as emcee-funmaker. You've probably seen Comedian Rice previously at the Earle Theater. Other notable vaudeville performers will include Jimmie Lackore, the "Boy With a Harmonica in Every Pocket" (he has 20 pockets) and clowning Berton and Kay. Ray Bradford's lively band and singer Bonnie Fleming will continue night along at Del Rio.

The Shoreham Blue Room is currently duplicated in Jelleff's windows as part of the "Washington Life" exhibit. Silver, china, menus and linen came directly from the Blue Room.

FACES AROUND PLACES. Cosmos Room. Prince Alexander Hohenlohe of the Polish Embassy and his pretty young wife. Chic Katharyn Fuqua in a Schiapperellish frock. Mayfair's Jimmy Byrd, taking a postman's holiday from "Mousey" Garner's antics, dancing ever so smoothly with pretty Jean De Pue . . . Lounge Riviera. Nancy Lawrence, young daughter of Writer David Lawrence, conga-stepping with Harold Crowell. Ted Church, radio director of the Republican National Committee . . . Troika. The Mexican Ambassador and Mme. Castillo Najera greeting Singer Lina D'Acosta, whom they'd previously met in Paris and Geneva.

THE RADDIO. If you want passes to Glenn Miller's broadcasts in the Wardman Park Theater tonight and tomorrow, call up WJSV, but immediately. Before and after the Miller air-waving, you can enjoy Grant Thompson's dancing in the Metronome Room . . . Dulcet Linda Carroll, of the King Cole Room, will soon be back on the "Washington Calling" program with Gene Archer.

"HELLZAPOPPIN'", in a miniature incarnation by Russell Swan, will be a diversion explosive at the Mayflower's "champagne and orchids party" tomorrow night. The silky dance creations of Loper and Barrat will include a couple that probably will figure in a new Broadway show. The Lounge will be embowered in bright autumn leaves. Dick Koons' music will have an obbligato of popping champagne corks. The party, we're sure, marks the start of one of Mayflower's gayest and most prosperous seasons.

Remember good-looking Burt Raeburn, who sang at Mayfair last season? He's just been signed for television appearances by R.C.A. Richard Hooper R.C.A. production chief at the World's Fair, says Burt is "a find."

NEW LOTUS STARS. Waltzing and violining combined with rapturous applause for Cardeno and Corinne at the Lotus. This pair is fresh from New York's Versailles. A sure-fire hit, too, is little Betty Lou, who does back-flips on a table so small it's a wonder she doesn't fall and crack her pretty shins . . . The Lotus' "fall opening" has been set for October 14 . . . Bill Strickland's Streamliners are getting "splendificent" new fall uniforms with powder-blue coats. Whee!

YOUR TRUE FORTUNE. River Bend's owner, Bob Gilliland, and his attractive missus, while visiting the roof garden of Baltimore's Southern Hotel last summer, were astonished at the accurate readings given them by Prince Akbar, yogi and palmist. Now Prince Akbar, at River Bend, will unveil what 1941 holds for you. Here's hoping it's a lucky year for you and you.

HANDSOME IS AS HANDSOME DOES. And that's handsomely in the Neptune Room, where the new Paramount Four decorate the bandstand with good looks and the air with fine harmonies. These lads, who recently played a solid 22 weeks at New York's Park Central, are Allen King, Michael Dubas, Tony Luson and Bill Uland.

MUSICO MAKERS. Eddie Whitesel, one of our town's niftier accordionists, has just joined the Robin Hood, will perform for the late cocktail hour along with Singer Dee Tracy, Pianist Hildreth Harrison . . . That smart girl, Eileen George of the Anchor Room, is blossoming out as a song writer. She's composing a Hawaiian song to end all Hawaiian songs. The lyrics would scorch the beach at Waikiki

MOST UNPREDICTABLE PIANIST in these parts is Felix Zimmer, of the Casino Royal. He plays Chopin interludes with a dreamy look, then jumps off the bandstand and into the floor show with bang-up clowning of the "Man W. C. Around."

Manager Augustus Gumpert of the Harrington Hotel says: "Only change in the Harrington Tavern will be that the customers will be listening to the football games instead of the baseball games."

New Librarian Takes Over

Miss Clara W. Herbert yesterday became librarian of the District of Columbia Library in ceremonies before trustees and branch library heads in the flower-crammed office used for 36 years by her retired predecessor, Dr. George F. Bowerman.

Attending the installation ceremonies were Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of public schools, and Library Trustees Frank J. Coleman, Albert W. Atwood and Mrs. Lyman B. Swormstedt. The oath of office was administered by Miss Helen I. Cavanagh, administrative assistant.

Later, a tea was held in the large office by the administrative staff honoring Miss Herbert. Many of the city-wide library staff of 200 attended. Flowers received from all branch libraries decorated the office.

First official act of the new librarian was to appoint Ralph A. Beals as assistant city librarian.

Beals, a member of Phi Beta Kappa from the University of California, is an expert in Miss Herbert's own interest of adult education, and has had teaching experience at Harvard and New York universities.

Beals has served as assistant to the director of the American Association for Adult Education, editor of the association's journal, and as secretary to the president of the University of California. He received his master's degree from Harvard and will be awarded a doctor of philosophy degree from the Graduate Library School of the University of Chicago this winter.

Beals is joint author with Leon Brady of a bibliography of the literature of adut education, to be published shortly.

My Mummy's Gone to the MAYFAIR

TONIGHT is Mummy's big night. Since I came to live at our house she and Daddy don't have many chances to step out. But when they do, they always want to go where they can have the most fun. At the Mayfair, Mummy says the food is wonderful, there's always something doing and it's a swell crowd. And Daddy says the best part of all is it doesn't cost him a week's salary.
Married or single, you'll love the Mayfair. Mousie Garner's gang is still with us. So is Frankie Meyers, the best piano and accordion man you ever heard. And you must hear Ruth McCullough sing. Stop in tonight; or for lunch this noon. You'll come back often.

ON OCTOBER 3, 1890, the National Permanent Building Association was organized for the purpose of assisting persons to cultivate the habit of thrift through SYSTEMATIC SAVING and to acquire homes. It has now completed a half century of continous service. During this period, many thousands of people have had the benefit of this assistance.
The greater Washington of today with its population of nearly a million people, was then a city of approximately 200,000. Much of the District of Columbia was undeveloped. Mount Pleasant—Columbia Heights—Chevy Chase—and many other important residential sections were still in use as farm lands. During this eventful half century, our city has spread out in all directions and every year the demand for homes has constantly increased.
The objective of this Association has been to render every possible service to the "INDIVIDUAL HOME OWNER." As a result of this policy, it has been both a privilege and a pleasure to assist thousands of young people to acquire property. All down through the years the simplicity of our plan of financing has met with universal approval and our record of constantly increasing volume is the most convincing proof of the desirability of our service.

Willkie's Text, Pledging Jobs to 9,600,000 Unemployed

Says There Would Be 'No Slaves—And No Masters'

Grand Rapids, Mich., Oct. 1 (AP). Following is the prepared text of Wendell L. Willkie's address here late today:

One cry is universal throughout this great broad land. It is "Give us jobs." Jobs that we may regain our self-respect—jobs that we may feed our families—jobs so that all of us can continue to the well-being of America. We want no dole. We want work—work for all—so that our idle factories will hum again and the farmer plant again—jobs to give us the wages to buy what America produces—that is what they are saying throughout America.

There are 9,600,000 men unemployed, and I intend to get them jobs—to put them back to work—to let the good black soil of America produce all that it can, and the factories manufacture all the things we need, because the consuming power of the Nation has not been touched, and with jobs, this consuming power will be released.

Birth Control for Pigs

The candidate for the third term recognized—before his first term—that the real problem facing this country was to get jobs for the men and women of America that didn't have them. He was right.

But the solution of his Administration was birth-control for pigs—while one-third of the Nation was ill-fed.

It was against nature, and against common sense.

Naturally, it failed. The New Dealers had to recognize—in 1936—that the primary problem was still jobs.

And now—in 1940—our major problem is still jobs.

There is one difference between the New Deal's position in this campaign—and its position in 1932 and 1936.

In 1932 and 1936 the New Dealers were vocal—they spoke on the subject. But in 1940—in the present campaign—all that is heard from the other side is a thunderous silence.

No Horizon Lines

It was some time ago that the New Dealers gave up talking about jobs. They now talk about unemployment—and they say that large numbers of the American people will always be out of work, because America is static—has reached the end of its growth—that there are too many Americans.

Well, I denounce that proposition—solemnly—and in the name of the American people.

There are no horizon lines to our industrial and agricultural frontiers.

And so—I am not going to talk to you about unemployment, as the New Deal does—and tell you what we can't do about it.

I am going to be affirmative—to talk to you about jobs, and how we are going to get them—you and I—and all of us—working together.

Now there are two ways for people to find work. One good American way is for them to work for themselves.

Two Kinds of Systems

The other way is to find an employer who needs you to help him—and who will hire you.

Most of us Americans would like to go in business ourselves. But we can't all do that. Even if we are ultimately able to work for ourselves, we have to start by working for somebody else. So, for most of us, getting a job means simply finding an employer.

There are only two kinds of employer systems in the world—two and only two. Under one system almost all of the people, who don't work for themselves, work for private employers. That is the system we have here in America, and it is the system we want to keep.

Under the other system, almost all of the people work for the state. That is the case in Communist Russia, and, in effect, in Nazi Germany and the other dictator countries.

Under a dictatorship there need never be any unemployment. The state tells you that you must do—tells you where you must do it—and tells you how you must do it. And you've got to go.

Yes—you have a job under those conditions. But you have bought that job with your freedom.

Freedom of Workers

We in America have made our decision with regard to that issue. We want to work either for ourselves—or for and with somebody else, and not for the state under a dictatorship.

Because we know—all of us know—that no matter in what shape it comes, dictatorship always means slavery for the people.

And finally it means the spirit which says, "You toil and make bread, and I'll eat it."

We believe, then, in the freedom of the workers to take whatever job they want—whatever jobs give them the good life—and the best opportunities.

No slaves—and no masters—this is the essence of democracy. That is the system I stand for, and that is the system you will get if you elect me President.

The Government—the legitimate, proper object of government is to do for the people what they need to have done but cannot do for themselves. Where they can do it themselves—for themselves—the Government ought not to interfere.

That is the old and tried American way, and it was successful. It was successful because it was based on principle—sound and crystal clear.

The New Deal seems to be united on the proposition that it should break with the past, but it doesn't seem to know where it is going.

So let us look at the problems facing those who work in our American system of free enterprise. Let us first see whether the New Deal is right in trying to kill free enterprise—or whether Abraham Lincoln was right when he said, "We shall sooner have the fowl by hatching the egg than by smashing it."

Three Reasons

As I see it, there are three reasons why American workers should fear the continuation of unemployment—

First, there are 9,600,000 people out of work today. That means there are 9,600,000 people looking for your job.

Second, our population is growing—is expanding. More than half a million new workers come to maturity each year. And more than half a million young men and women graduate from school—to look for jobs—jobs that they cannot find.

If they have no place to go, they will be out looking for your job, too. And the next year—and each succeeding year, there will be another half million of them.

And third—and this is the most important to all of you—it is simply not possible for the Government to go on supporting a growing number of unemployed. Somebody has to pay the bill—and that somebody is you—all of us who have jobs.

One-fifth of our national income goes for taxes.

The biggest item on that tax bill—aside from defense—it relief for the unemployed.

But even the taxes on you have not been enough. And so, of course, the New Deal has found an easy method of paying the big relief bill.

Beyond Income

It borrows the money.

In the 7½ years, it has borrowed about $22,000,000,000.

If we go living beyond our income, there is bound to be a collapse.

Is this the doctrine of Wendell Willkie? Let the Democratic candidate of 1932 for the first term speak for me. In his political speech at Pittsburgh on October 19, 1932, Mr. Roosevelt said:

"If the Nation is living within its income, its credit is good. If, in some crises, it lives beyond its income, for a year or two, it can usually borrow temporarily at reasonable rates. But if, like a spendthrift, it throws discretion to the winds, and is willing to make no sacrifice at all in spending; if it extends its taxing to the limit of the people's power to pay and continues to pile up deficits, then it is on the road to bankruptcy."

Now, the question is, how can we get off this road to bankruptcy that the candidate for the third term talked about way back in 1932; and, if we can get off that road, how do we get back on the road to prosperity?

There is only one way it can be done.

The road to prosperity is paved with jobs—and the way to get on that road is production.

Production Makes Jobs

Just as the remedy for the ever-increasing national debt is jobs, so the way to make those jobs is to set production in motion, to produce.

What makes a job? The New Deal doesn't make jobs. It isn't the New Deal that gets you the truck that you drive or pays the rent for the store you operate.

The truth is—production makes jobs—business makes jobs—big business, little business, corporations, partnerships, and small companies. They all make jobs.

If you stop production—or if, as the New Deal has done, you discourage and cut down production—you have created unemployment.

And you have cut the jugular vein of America.

So, the first thing that we are going to do to put the 9,600,000 back to work is to encourage increased production. That will mean that the present employers will hire more men.

But, it is not enough that the present employers should hire more men, although, of course, that is very important.

What we must have is new enterprises—about 700,000 of them to take care of our needs.

As you well know, it isn't easy to start a new business nowadays. Taxes, under the New Deal, are on such an inefficient and unscientific basis that they have discouraged new enterprises, and as a consequence, have prevented recovery.

Stabilize Tax Structure

So, the second thing we are going to do to put the 9,600,000 men back to work is to stabilize our tax structure—put it on a scientific and efficient basis—so that men can predict the future with some reasonable degree of certainty.

And this will be our yardstick on that: Enterprises that make a profit must pay a tax, a tax that is proportionate to the profit made. But the tax structure will be on a base that will not discourage new enterprises from starting, from hiring more workers. On the contrary, it will be on a stabilized basis so that the new enterprise will feel that it can risk its money in new enterprises to make jobs.

Now, the New Deal has been frank about one thing. It doesn't like business. It has tried to put business in wrong with the American people—and particularly with labor. To a certain extent, I think that the propagandists and apologists for the New Deal have been successful in their attempt.

I think that they have fooled some of the people with their bunkum.

But most of us know that under our system private enterprise is merely another name for jobs. And most of us, except the New Dealers in Washington, knew that you can't have a system that is half socialistic and half private enterprise.

So, the third thing that we are going to do to put the 9,600,000 men back to work is to cut out the red tape that now paralyzes this country, to simplify the innumerable regulations, cut down the weight of Government demands for reports—and more important, stop the hostile attitude of Government toward private enterprise.

Labor Safeguards

Why do I say this? The whole country knows that I favor proper regulation of business—particularly big business. But too much red tape, too many regulations to fill out, too much supervision and suspicion on the part of the Government's representatives, actually makes enterprise inefficient—adds to the cost of operation, and to that extent—and in recent years it has been to a great extent—decreases the number of jobs and the amount of money those employed can be paid.

Labor must protect the safeguards it has won—collective bargaining, social security, a floor on wages and a ceiling on hours.

I am for them—and all groups in the country are for them.

But all the laws in the world will not save us from the facts. There is nothing so inexorable as a fact.

The fact is, 9,600,000 men are out of work and the Administration is doing nothing about it except to say we are all through.

The fact is that our national debt is constantly increasing—in geometric proportions—and our economy is contracting.

The fact is that we are, as the candidate for the third term said in 1932, on the road to bankruptcy.

The only thing that will save us, the only that will protect the minimum guarantees labor has already won and put the country in a position to enlarge those guarantees, is increased production, more work—growth and expansion.

That is why I ask you to join with me in creating new jobs—in expanding our economy—in increasing our production. We can do it, you and I—together we can save America.

Lehman Malicious, Willkie Asserts

Together with labor, industry and agriculture, he would put America back to work.

He talked in a quiet, conversational tone, new to listeners aboard train, as he pleaded with workers to "think, think, think," to "keep your minds open," to vote as they pleased but to hear his side first.

Cheers and Boos

At Pontiac he left the train to make a speech at the courthouse. The reception was distinctly hostile at this automobile truck center. Willkie never ignores heckling, nor did he in his Pontiac courthouse speech.

He told the crowd that just before Germany, Italy and other nations lost their democracy, "men, misguided and misled, substituted catcalls for thinking."

One egg was thrown, striking Mrs. Wilkie's leg, as the car drove away. Another egg struck a photographer in another car, and still a third hit a woman in the throng.

As the Wilkie car passed the Yellow Truck & Coach Co., white-collar workers from the windows of one building cheered him, while workers in a factory building booed.

Through the C. I. O. regions of Flint, the reception was chilly, but an audience listened. Moving into normally Republican territory at Lansing, he was warmly greeted and the crowds were large.

At each stop, he readapted his Seattle labor speech, but supplied more particulars on just how he proposed to find jobs by increased production, tax incentives, and simplified regulations.

Tolerance Pledged

Wendell L. Willkie told Jewish citizens last night that "insofar as it is within my capacity to keep so sacred a pledge, the United States of America will never harbor racial or religious intolerance and persecution."

A message of greeting from the Presidential nominee in connection with the Jewish New Year was made public here by the Republican National Committee.

Spain Unlikely To Fight Now, Rome Learns

Franco Awaiting Right Time to Take Gibraltar, Is View

By the Associated Press

Rome, Oct. 7.—The likelihood of Spain entering the war or even joining the Axis powers at this time in a formal alliance against Britain was virtually discarded by political circles today as Generalissimo Franco's minister of government, Ramon Serrano Suner, conferred with Premier Mussolini.

Spain, sid Virginio Gayda, authoritative Fascist editor of Giornale d'Italia, "is and can remain among the nonbelligerent powers, but its men and its policy naturally belong to the Axis system."

Observers regarded it as probable that Franco would keep Spain out of the war until the time appeared propitious for the attempt to make a quick capture of Gibraltar by German and Italian forces working in his behalf.

Attitude Useful, Says Gayda

(Italy herself kept out of the war until last June, when the fall of France was certain.)

"Spain is at the side of Italy and Germany," wrote Gayda, "and this attitude is useful to the cause of the new order in Europe, even if it does not achieve the form of immediate armed intervention beside the Axis powers."

The Spanish envoy, who conferred last week in Berlin with Adolf Hitler and Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop at the time Japan joined the Rome-Berlin Axis, had a brief talk with Mussolini this morning and then went to luncheon with Italian Foreign Minister Count Ciano.

His conference with Mussolini, one source said, were aimed at "reinforcing, clarifying and making precise the identity of views between the Nationalist Spain of Generalissimo Franco and the two victorious powers."

The source also remarked that Italo-German friendship for Spain would not permit any pressure to be brought on Spain for active participation in the war, and remarked that England would probably say that "Spain resisted Axis pressure," even though none was exerted.

The Fascist press generally reflected a belief that Spain would be used as a base of attack on Gibraltar.

"Spain's position as it will remain for the present," declared Il Popolo di Roma, "is that of being vigilant and watchful over all that happens in the European world, ready at the opportune moment to use her rights."

Madrid, Oct. 1 (AP).—The news that Spain is to remain a nonbelligerent in the European war was hailed with joy today in this country which coincidentally was celebrating the fourth anniversary of Generalissimo Franco's assumption of authority as chief of the regime.

Crowds demonstrated in the streets in El Ferrol, the Generalissimo's birthplace.

Admiral Evans Put in Charge Of London Winter Shelter

Hero of 'the Broke' To Direct Housing Of City's Millions

By the Associated Press

London, Oct. 1.—With winter approaching and Nazi air raids continuing the government today enlisted the directive genius of Admiral Sir Edward Ratcliffe Garth Russell Evans — "Evans of the Broke"—to solve the urgent problem of providing warm and adequate shelter for all of London's people.

Britons who know him say they confidently expect him to cut through the red tape which now keeps closed at night some of the big shelters under commercial buildings with the same expedition that made him the hero of the Dover patrol of 1917.

For like his old friend, Winston Churchill, "Evans of the Broke" has a reputation for getting things done—and done well.

Name to Conjure With

He's younger than Churchill—just under 59—but his name for nearly a generation has been something to conjure with wherever British seamen foregather.

All Britons know of him and even schoolboys know of the Dover patrol exploit when he commanded the Broke and with that vessel accompanied by another destroyer, the Swift, reverted to the primitive naval warfare mode of fighting called "boarding" and attacked six German destroyers. They sank two, rammed one broadside, and badly damaged the others.

This most-decorated man in the British navy was born in 1881. Expelled from school for fighting for pennies in a London meat market when scarcely 10 years old, he joined the mercantile marine training ship Worcester and later the navy when he was 16.

Three Lessons

He learned at least three things in that school: To speak the truth, have a daily cold bath and never to speak disrespectfully of women.

He made three expeditions to Antarctica, in one case taking charge of an expedition after the death of Capt. Scott.

After the World War he was promoted to rear admiral and commanded the Royal Australian Navy. Later he was commander in chief of the African station and of the home fleet.

He was rector of Aberdeen University for two years (1937-1939) and then retired to write boys' books of adventure. When Churchill became first lord of the admiralty he prevailed on Evans to go to Norway as a naval attache. When Norway collapsed he returned to England.

Lately he has been one of London's two regional commissioners for civil defense.

Ground Broken By Fleming for G. W. Auditorium

Banker Robert V. Fleming, chairman of the board of trustees of George Washington University, manipulated controls of a steam shovel yesterday to break ground formally for the school's new $950,000 auditorium at Twenty-first and H streets northwest.

In a drizzling rain, the first shovel full of earth was raised and excavation begun. Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of the university, spoke to an audience of trustees and faculty members, expressing his appreciation for the $750,000 bequest of the late Abram Lisner.

This sum, together with $200,000 donated by the George Washington Memorial Association, will cover the land and building costs. The four-floor auditorium will have a seating capacity of 1,500 and will be constructed of limestone. It is expected to be completed within 18 months.

Almazanist General Slain

By the Associated Press

Monterey, Mexico, Oct. 1.—Mexican soldiers pounced today on Brig. Gen. Andres Zarzosa and shot him to death a few hours, they said, before the zero hour for a revolutionary coup intended to capture Monterrey, Mexico's greatest industrial city and seize power in this American border state.

Zarzosa was an old friend, active campaign supporter and military subordinate of Juan Andrew Almazan, who lost on the basis of official returns in his attempt to become President of Mexico over the opposition of the present administration party.

He was shot to death and a band of his adherents was blasted out of a villa they had rented in this city after a wild gun battle early this morning.

First police, then soldiers, laid siege to the house.

The police said a man whom Zarzosa tried to persuade to help him became frightened by the proportions of the scheme and squealed.

Zarzosa, the police were told, planned to strike with the dawn to seize the garrison, governor's palace, city hall, and all other state and local offices.

One of the general's friends was killed with him, a soldier was wounded, seven persons were arrested and the other alleged plotters fled in the darkness from their headquarters, over rooftops and to the adjacent streets.

Although the authorities beat Zarzosa to the draw, it was reported that half a dozen bridges were fired by the accused plotters. There was, however, no interruption in international train service between Monterrey and Laredo, Tex., 150 miles to the north, and other trains reached Monterrey on time during the night.

Tonight Monterrey was quiet and the authorities said the revolutionary movement was dead. The Mexican war department insisted other parts of the country were tranquil.

This was the first attempt on a sizable scale by Almazan's supporters to bring about the revolution which they have predicted is coming to Mexico, although troops have put down small rebel uprisings in several states since Almazan was declared the loser in July's presidential election to Gen. Manuel Avila Camacho, the administration candidate to succeed President Lazaro Cardenas.

Almazan, insisting he was "counted out," has gone to the United States.

A Democratic Army

It is gratifying to note that Gen. Marshall, the chief of staff, believes that an army of citizens drawn voluntarily and otherwise from every condition of life "must be essentially a democratic institution."

In line with this view, Gen. Marshall has announced that soldiers who, during their training period, show special abilities or aptitudes for leadership will be sent to special schools and commissioned as reserve officers. Meanwhile, discipline, which is essential to any army, is to be achieved "through the exercise of leadership and mutual cooperation." Presumably, the spit-and-polish, you'll-take-it-and-you'll-like-it system of the old professional service is now only an unpleasant memory.

This is not, of course, to deny that the old methods made admirable soldiers out of the material available. Nor is it to suggest that the works of Mr. Dale Carnegie and Mrs. Emily Post be substituted for the Infantry Drill Regulations and the Articles of War. But Army leaders must remember that they have now a twofold task: They must educate their men not merely for soldiering but also for an eventual return to civil life. And a soldier who is made, by whatever method, into merely a dutiful automaton, content to relegate all matters involving thought or decision to his superiors, is scarcely trained for the responsibilities of citizenship.

The attitude of mind into which the professional soldier so easily lapses was probably the main reason for the laws which decreed his disfranchisement in most States of the early Republic. It was feared, and not without logic, that men so much accustomed to domination by the will of their officers in their minutes daily concerns might as easily be dominated in the matter of casting ballots.

Even to this day, according to a recent bulletin of the Public Administration Clearing House, there are six States which do not grant voting privileges to citizens who are absent by reason of military or naval service. And one State, Texas, permits reservists and National Guardsmen to vote but not members of the regular establishments.

If we are to have the democratic army that the Selective Service Act implies, and which Gen. Marshall has promised, all such laws must, of course, be modified. At the same time, the Army leaders must make sure that nothing is done—over and above the absolute exigencies of discipline as Gen. Marshall has defined it—to discourage that independent exercise of intelligence and judgment which is the basis of citizenship in a democratic society.

Col. F. C. Harrington

The WPA has been the subject of vehement controversy ever since its establishment in 1935. And doubts regarding its wisdom and value as an agency for relief and recovery have increased rather than diminished with the passage of time.

It is significant, however, that one charge frequently leveled against the WPA in the past is rarely mentioned now. Most observers agree that the WPA has made remarkable progress in divorcing itself from politics. Thus, in contrast with 1936, the WPA has not been a prominent issue in the present campaign.

Credit for this remarkable improvement belongs in no small measure to Col. Francis Clark Harrington, whose death occurred Monday. An Army officer with a high sense of duty and no political axes to grind, he leaned backward as WPA administrator to remove every possible taint of politics from his agency.

Col. Harrington had served as head of this enormous Federal relief agency since 1938. His job was not an easy one. WPA workers had come to look on their jobs not as temporary benefits but as permanent employment. The action of Congress in ordering a reduction in WPA ranks thus produced bitter protests, as did the provision to eliminate prevailing wages on WPA projects.

It was Col. Harrington's unpleasant task to carry out these provisions, and he did so with courage and determination. He was beyond intimidation. Yet he never for a moment lost his keen understanding of the human side of the problem facing him. A devoted and efficient public servant, his sudden and untimely death will be sadly felt.

Risk For Democracy

The country is indebted to Young B. Smith, dean of Columbia University Law School, for a thorough and thoughtful analysis of the two-term tradition to which American Presidents have adhered, voluntarily or under compulsion, for a century and a half. Dean Smith's brief was presented to the Senate Judiciary subcommittee conducting hearings on various proposals to limit the eligibility of Presidents to succeed themselves.

At irregular intervals throughout our history statesmen have warned the people against continuation of any Chief Executive in office for more than eight years. From Thomas Jefferson down to Senator Norris, these men have feared that some day a popular President would take advantage of his power to perpetuate himself in office. They have fought against that danger only because they realize that it is "fraught with peril to our free institutions."

Senators Norris, La Follette and various others have now found it expedient to change their minds. The principle to which they formerly clung has been swallowed up by political considerations of the moment. But the judgment of such men as Jefferson, Jackson, Cleveland and McKinley still stands as a warning against abandonment of basic principles of government, even in an emergency.

"But if the principle of rotation be a sound one, as I conscientiously believe it to be with respect to this office," said President Jefferson, "no pretext should ever be permitted to dispense with it, because there never will be a time when real difficulties will not exist, and furnish a plausible pretext for dispensation." Later he expressed hope that any President consenting to run for a third term would be defeated "on this demonstration of ambitious views."

Jackson sought to limit the tenure of any President by constitutional amendment as an "additional safeguard" to "our liberties." Cleveland, even in his day, feared that the power of a President to perpetuate himself in office was a "most serious danger to that calm, deliberate, and intelligent action which must characterize a government by the people."

Throughout our national history these warnings against a third term for any President have prevailed because of the strong popular desire to avoid risks that might impair our democratic system. Yet at no time has the need for precautions of this kind been as great as it is today. For the Presidency has grown in power beyond anything visualized by our statesmen who fixed this precedent.

Dean Smith points out that the Government now has more than 1,000,000 employes, that it gives aid to more than 8,000,000 persons, that it controls vast regulatory agencies and that during the last seven and a half years it has spent $60,000,000,000. With such potent means of influencing the people, the Administration in power has a tremendous advantage in any campaign. And the longer it remains in office the greater its advantage may become. There is a grave question as to whether elections can remain free in these circumstances without limiting an administration's period of service.

Moreover, a President serving 12, 16 or 20 years would probably gain complete control over the Supreme Court. A man of such power might also dominate Congress by the strength of his political following and his prestige as a semi-permanent institution.

It is possible, of course, that a man entrusted with the enormous powers of the Presidency over a long period might exercise them wisely. But that is also true of monarchs and dictators. The disconcerting fact is that any President who succeeds in breaking down the two-term tradition may be able to decide for himself whether our democratic institutions should be retained or discarded. With each successive prolongation of his authority, he would tend to become more the master than the servant of the people.

That danger is further increased by the present emergency. For in times of stress it is particularly essential to invest the President with broad powers. Thus the emergency as well as the extended tenure would tend to leave the fate of the Nation in the hands of one man.

Men For The Navy

By virtue of the Burke-Wadsworth Act and the steadily rising production of the defense industries, both the man power and material needs of our expanding military establishment will be met.

The Navy, at present, is not so fortunate. Congress has appropriated vast sums for the construction of fighting ships. During the next 12 months, for instance, our fleet will be increased by more than 50 units, including two battleships, each of 35,000 tons, 30 to 35 destroyers and submarines and about 20 auxiliary vessels. By 1943 the Navy expects to have about 925 ships and 15,000 airplanes.

To man this armada will require about 33,500 officers and 460,000 enlisted men. But these officers and men cannot be trained overnight. It takes from two to six years to train men in the specialized technique of the Navy. About four years are required to train a petty officer. In other words, the additional men needed for the two-ocean Navy that is expected to come into being during the next six years should begin their training now.

At present, however, the maximum enlisted strength of the Navy is fixed at 172,000 men or a little more than one-third the trained force that will be required when the fleet reaches its full authorized strength. And, while part of the gap can be filled from the Naval Reserve, the rest must be made up by enlistments which cannot be deferred too long.

In the circumstances, it is a pity that the present Congress has not made possible a more rapid expansion of naval personnel. To be sure, the Navy does not expect to reach the 172,000 level, for which funds are available, before December. But a subsequent delay in recruitments due to lack of appropriations would hardly be in the public interest.

In the meantime, however, a measure is before Congress raising the authorized enlisted strength of the Marine Corps to a minimum of 50,000 men. Here again the selective service system provides no solution to the personnel problem. The Marine Corps can be recruited, because of the long training period necessary, only by volunteer enlistments. In making possible a larger Marine Corps Congress would be doing the right thing. A parallel expansion in Navy personnel is also in order.

Fair Compromise

A reasonable compromise appears to have been reached on disposition of the Walter-Logan bill. Sponsors of that measure are naturally reluctant to see it die for want of debate and final action in the Senate. It was passed by the House long ago and sent to the floor of the Senate by a unanimous vote of the Judiciary Committee.

On the other hand, Senator Barkley had good reason to ask that consideration of the bill be delayed until the Senate has an opportunity to examine the forthcoming report of the Attorney General's committee on administrative procedure. Both opponents and advocates of the bill should be ready to act, therefore, when it has been reexamined in the light of this committee's advice.

Any major bill affecting the relations of the Government to citizens demands analysis from many points of view. The Walter-Logan bill would not only modify the procedure of numerous Federal agencies; it would also institute new rights of appeal from the decisions of various regulatory bodies. While the bill has been given extensive study by special committees of the American Bar Association and by the Senate and House Judiciary committees, the Senate will be in a better position to act on this measure after it has scrutinized the findings of still another group of experts.

It should be noted, however, that this compromise in the Senate puts the Attorney General's committee under special obligation to hasten its report. Sponsors of the bill in the Senate had been led to believe that this report would be ready long ago. If it is not available when the Senate takes up the Walter-Logan bill after election day, there will be no excuse for further postponement.

Much Ado

If you insist on making the point that the destinies of mankind and the history of the next thousand years are in no wise involved in the outcome of the World Series which opens today at Crosley Field, Cincinnati, we shall be reluctantly forced to agree.

But then it scarcely makes any difference whether Hamlet, Prince of Denmark, manages to get even with his uncle and to come into the throne of which he has been so wickedly cheated, or whether Hamlet dies in the fifth act. After all Hamlet, Claudius and all the rest are just imaginary characters, as Bucky Walters and Charlie Gehringer and all the rest are just a lot of young fellows who are getting paid for playing baseball.

Nevertheless, a lot of persons, even nowadays, prefer reading or watching "Hamlet" to reading something that really matters, say, for example, "Mein Kampf." And so we don't mind confessing ourselves that we would as soon be screaming hysterically from a box at Crosley Field this afternoon as crouching stoically in an air-raid shelter in London.

In fact, there is some reason to believe that Londoners now regard the historic air battles which are deciding their destinies as a good deal of a bore. But whoever heard of anybody being bored at a World Series game—even in a dreadful World Series like the one last year?

If you have no enemies, you have some friends you should be ashamed of.

Threatening Dangers

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Unfortunately there is a false assumption circulating among misinformed and intelligent people as to the power of Japan—namely, that she won't be able to conquer China and that she is economically weak. Intelligent Americans should not fall for such statements and permit this Nation to become involved in a war, not only with Japan, but with a military combination such as the world has never before seen.

Let us all mind our own business. By our meddling we drove Japan into the arms of the Axis. Are we going to continue our bullheadedness and allow our men, women and children to be slaughtered in order that Indo-China and the Dutch East Indies may possibly be made safe for imperialistic purposes.

Let us be calm and realistic and not permit warmongers to run us into a trap from which we may never escape. J. H. J.

Efficacy Of Polls

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It doesn't take an expert to see that preelection polls, such as the Gallup, are interfering with the democratic process. Many factors seek to prevent people from doing their own thinking anyway. Let's leave them free to try and do so, instead of dressing up the bandwagon and blaring the trumpets.

A candidate should have a sporting chance. Maybe Mr. Willkie can win even without one.

FAIR PLAY,

Washington, Sept. 28.

A Campaign Issue?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Republicans should be able to make a live campaign issue of the Japanese-German pact. The pact is the crowning achievement of our blundering foreign policy, which might be described as speaking roughly and carrying a feather duster.

We are planning our own "Munich" in which China will be the victim. We have forced Japan into Germany's arms by a series of provocative acts, and now when England can give us no help in Asia, and is rapidly making her peace with Japan, we may find our bluff called.

The prospect of sending our boys to fight in Eastern Asia to preserve the open door in China will hardly appeal to American voters.

Nominations

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Who nominated Hitler?—Hitler. Who nominated Mussolini?—Mussolini! Who nominated Stalin?—Stalin! Who nominated Roosevelt?—Roosevelt! Who nominated Willkie?—the people!

Free Elections

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Theoretically, the American voter is free to make his choice at the polls, but our social system has become so honeycombed with political "pull" and misdirected power, he only too frequently becomes a pawn, manipulated at will by those that control the board.

There is a certain type of individual who upholds the letter of the law with all the force at their command, as did Inspector Javert in Hugo's novel, "Les Miserables," while ignoring the fact that there are elements in life that transcend theories and formulas. Javert, in a fanatical attempt to enforce the letter of the law, sacrificed a truer sense of liberty.

Today we are told by our President that we are not menaced by a dictatorship, as we are protected by free elections. This is true only in theory.

Our voters, far from being free to vote as their conscience dictates, are frequently compelled to vote as they are dictated to. They are victims of circumstances over which they have little control. In olden days a workman was curtly informed that the factory would be closed unless he voted as directed. In more modern times those on relief or dependent on New Deal jobs are unwilling to cast their vote for what they believe may prove a better social order, simply because they are unwilling to risk the loss of a pay check, when in reality the risk may be small.

E. K. GOLDSBOROUGH.

Prayer For England

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "An Episcopalian" suggests that the appointing of a day of prayer for Great Britain was wrong because we should not pray, "merely for victory for one belligerent," but even more earnestly, "for the nations of the world that they may be led into the ways of truth and justice."

This call for prayer should very clearly be above all controversy, and it seems to me that the writer missed the whole point of the matter. Unfortunately, so very many people conceive of the Christian religion as a spineless affair which, under all circumstances, turns the other cheek for another blow, whenever attacked by the un-Christian. This is a great misconception. Had the money changer in the temple been armed with swords, I do not doubt that Jesus Christ would have driven them out with a sword instead of a whip when they defiled His house.

If we are not of those who "have eyes but see not," we know that the present war is not merely an attack against Christianity, all it stands for and all of the blessings it has brought to the world. Certainly we may pray that they may be led to see the error of their ways, but we may, with equal propriety, pray for those who are willing to sacrifice their lives on the altar of devotion to their Christian principles, that God may strengthen their hands.

No man is perfect, and England has never claimed perfection, but it is a Christian nation fighting big odds against everything un-Christian. Although, like Meroz, we have not yet come to the help of the Lord, we should not permit any petty and un-Christian prejudices against her to keep us from praying for those fighting for everything we claim to believe in.

The Totalitarian Pact And The U. S.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We are now faced by a hostile alliance of Japan, Italy and Germany, with Spain and possibly France coming in shortly. These nations, with those which they control, represent nearly the entire world with the exception of Britain and Russia. Britain is staggering and Russia is certainly no friend of the United States.

We have, therefore, reached the peak of isolation—not the isolation worked for by Senators Wheeler, Johnson, Clark, Nye and others, who wanted nonparticipation in other people's wars—but the isolation we have been muddled into by the Administration and numerous hair-brained columnists. Having courted hostility from all, we are now faced with the results of that hostility.

Can this alliance be, as the State Department says, a natural result of the aggressor movement and a fusion of interests betwen Japan and Germany? There is nothing natural for Germany in the alliance. It jeopardizes her delicate position with Russia upon which the whole success of her war in Europe depends, and it presents to Japan the spoils of her successes to date.

Nor did Japan desire an alliance with Germany. She needs, above all, time to concentrate on the war in China, and wants no part of the European War. She was forced into the tie-up by repeated United States spankings, climaxed by the embargo on scrap steel.

Heaven only knows why we must go about reforming the world—by force, if necessary. But if we must, and the Administration seems to feel that we must, why must we try to reform everything at once?

For eight years we have watched Japanese aggression in Asia and have done nothing—eight years in which America and Britain together could have checked her at will. Now with Britain fighting a death struggle, with the British fleet immobilized, with our resources desperately needed at home, the Administration has gone out of its way to seek trouble with Japan.

If this country must sit in on the game of "power politics," why can't our indispensable leaders take heed from the rules set down by masters in the game?

The first and by a thousand fold most important strategic rule is to divide your opponents and preserve the balance of power for yourself.

Britain, who has controlled Europe for a hundred years, has never forgotten that rule. She has never fought a European enemy without a European ally. She has never in a hundred years fought a major enemy overseas and an enemy in Europe at the same time. She has never, if it could possibly be avoided, let her enemies make common cause.

Yet, in spite of the fact that neither Germany nor Japan have anything to gain and have everything to lose from hostilities with the United States; in spite of the fact that they have nothing in common but gangsterism, which is no tie at all, and distrust each other thoroughly, in spite of the fact that coincidentally neither the United States nor Japan is ready for a major war; in spite of all these factors, the Administration in Washington, alone and unaided and contrary to the efforts of Britain to pacify Japan by closing the Burma road, has managed to throw Japan and Germany into each other's arms for an immediate alliance against the United States.

In doing this, the Administration has not only violated every rule of political strategy, but it has also laid this country open to the necessity of war on two fronts which in turn violates every rule of military and naval strategy and has in the past nearly always proved fatal. ZOLTAN REDAY.

The Post Impressionist

Man Of Wrath

IN MOMENTS of depression I am inclined to think that people have no convictions beyond the desirability of the material comforts of life. Then I go around and talk to Bake and, if I am lucky, see him in action. Bake has convictions.

Bake is our druggist in this small town in the Ozarks. Those who have lived in small towns will appreciate the importance and the influence which such a position entails. The nearest doctor is some 40 miles away, and consequently everyone brings his aches, pains, and ills to Bake.

In addition, his drugstore is a sort of community club. But it is a very select club and as Bake's convictions grow, the club's membership dwindles.

During those tragic days of May and June, for example, Bake and I followed the war bulletins over the radio. One evening, when it became evident, even through the veil of censorship, that the French cause was lost, Bake was listening to the accounts of that wild scramble across France that could not even be dignified by the name of retreat. He was close to tears, for he had served with the A. E. F. in France for 18 months and he loved the French people as only one who has lived among them in the provinces can.

One of his best customers saw Bake's distress and endeavored to cheer him up. "What are you taking it so hard for, Bake?" he asked. "Them frogs won last time, and now it's the Germans' turn to win."

Bake's answer was beautiful in its simplicity. With one well-aimed blow he knocked his customer flat on the floor, and then dragged him out by the scruff of the neck. As he deposited him none too gently on the sidewalk, Bake warned him, somewhat unnecessarily, never to show his face inside the store again.

Bake has equally strong convictions about the WPA. He takes the attitude that his taxes go directly to pay the wages of the WPA force in this county, and Bake doesn't like it. Not long ago, the county director of the WPA came in the store.

"What can I do for you, sir?" asked Bake.

"Nothing," replied the WPA director. "I'm just looking around."

"This is no blankety-blank WPA project for you to be sticking your nose into," Bake informed him. "Now you get out and stay out."

Some of Bake's convictions are a bit difficult to understand unless one is able to follow the beautifully logical trail which leads up to them. Take the matter of the CCC boys, for instance. Bake dispenses beer at his fountain, and a number of CCC boys from the camp outside town had fallen into the habit of drinking beer at Bake's counter. One evening, when four of them were quietly enjoying their drinks, Bake, out of a clear sky, brandished a revolver under their foam-flecked noses and ordered them out.

It's really quite simple. Bake served in the Regular Army, and he has a great contempt, like some other Regulars, for Reserve officers—"Boy Scout leaders," he calls them. From there, it's a perfect syllogism. Bake loathes Reserve officers. Reserve officers command CCC companies. Therefore, CCC boys can't drink beer at Bake's establishment.

Bake has a fiery passion for justice of his own peculiar brand. The other day, a dear friend of Bake's, one of his best and most regular customers, was arrested and thrown into jail. Bake called on the mayor the next morning.

"What did you throw Tom in jail for?" he asked, breathing heavily.

"Well," said the mayor, "we're holding him for reckless driving. But," he rashly added, "we haven't decided what to charge the four boys with that were pushing his car."

Bake pinned the mayor against the wall and gave him a smashing blow in the mouth which loosened most of his teeth. One may well wonder why Bake himself was not jailed after this summary administration of justice. The answer is that there is no detachment of Marines in this neighborhood, and nothing less would be equal to the task of putting Bake in jail.

So our club dwindles, and pessimists among us look forward to the day when only Bake will be allowed to enter his drugstore. They forget the country people, "the boys in blue," as Bake calls them.

Although his circle of friends here in town is steadily diminishing, Bake reigns supreme in the hearts of the country people. He will get up at any hour of the night and traverse miles of rugged trails to help the sick. He gives away more medicines than he sells. Fully half the boys of the county under 20 have "Bake" somewhere in their names, for he has helped bring most of them into the world. Bake knows his stock of medicines thoroughly, and in addition he realizes that the medicine many of his patients need most is food. Consequently he carries a gunny sack of provisions with him on many of his trips into the hills, in addition to his kit of medicines.

Bake is my best friend. He'd knock me down if I said a kind word for Stalin; but it's comforting to know that if anyone else were to knock me down, Bake would first execute vengeance upon him and then bind my wounds.

JOHN T. APPLEBY.

Attention, Mr. Sullivan

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Anent Mark Sullivan's soft-pedaled but querulous "New World Order" in The Post of September 27, may I ask why he thought it necessary to go back to Waterloo and other long-past crises to find illustrations of revelry and humor upon the eve of grave occasions?

Who can suppose that Mr. Sullivan is unfamiliar with the relief which Lincoln found and gave to the darkest hours by his humor and jests? Or that Mr. Sullivan is unfamiliar with the uncommon and priceless gift of sustained and sustaining good humor under incomparable stress of President Roosevelt?

On The Record

By Dorothy Thompson

"This Way Of Life"

THERE WAS a curious juxtaposition of headlines in the Sunday Herald Tribune. Right across the page at the top was the banner: "Willkie says this way of life will pass if he loses." Under it: "Japan says she will help make over the entire world."

"This way of life" is passing with extreme rapidity all over the world, and some ingredients of our way of life are certain to pass, peace or war, or whoever wins or whatever the outcome. Even if the war had never occurred, "this way of life" would have been profoundly modified. Indeed, the war is part of the process of modifying it, and there is no one who can imagine any means of survival that does not imply modification. Certainly, Mr. Willkie cannot, for he says that democracy, to survive, must be dynamic, not static, and he supports conscription in peace-time, which, in itself, means a drastic break with our traditional way of life.

The great internal problem in this country and all countries is, indeed, to find out just what in our way of life we want to preserve, come hell and high water, and what we are willing to change.

There is a tendency among the more prosperous native-born, middle-class groups to identify the American way of life with the particular system of private enterprise, big business leadership, mass consumption of highly advertised products, monopolistic merger at the top and ruthless competition elsewhere which certainly dominated American life from the beginning of the great industrial expansion after the Civil War until the great crash in 1929.

BUT THIS WAY, and the values deriving from it, never had unchallenged sway. Rural New England looked back to many forms of cooperative endeavor; all the Utopian dreams and Utopian experiments in which this country has been inventive, from the Oneida Community to the Mormons, had quite different customs and ideals; this way of life has been challenged and criticized for two generations both by the radicals and by the real conservatives, and most of all—most consistently and unanimously—it has been challenged, and without exception, by American poets and philosophers.

So, what is the American way of life?

Actually, in surveying the past and contemplating the present, we observe that the American way has meant very different things in different periods of history, and very different things among different sections of the population at the same time.

The American way is not the same for a Negro sharecropper on an Alabama plantation and for a Vermont farmer. The former lives in an economy which grew up as the successor to chattel slavery in a defeated and impoverished section of the country, and which we are only beginning to regard as a national problem. The latter pursues a way of life according to an almost unbroken tradition of over a hundred years.

THE WAY OF LIFE of an industrial worker on an assembly belt has little relation to the way of life by his ancestors, who carried their own tools. The way of life of Long Island society is not the same as the way of life of a Manhattan garment worker. The way of life among first or second generation immigrants in great cities and huge industrial centers is not the same as the way of small-town Americans who are members of the D. A. R.

One can discern a thread that runs through everything—through progress, regression and constant change, in unbroken continuity—the desire of this people for greater freedom and equality; for more real freedom in terms of education and human dignity and for equality geared upward, not downward; the conviction that this end is to be achieved through political liberty and an undaunted idealism and faith that it can be won.

In times of general prosperity the faith is likely to languish. But in danger it revives, as the most wholesome sign of the basic oneness of this so divergent people. In those times of stress and danger the leadership that knows how to play on this one unbroken string is invincible. That string produces a familiar and trusted music. For it is part of our destiny that we are a Nation of idealists.

Now, this Nation is in danger from without because—as the second headline indicates—there is a plan abroad "to make over the entire world." It is, we read, to be divided "into spheres of influence." The process of so dividing it threatens freedom and equality throughout the world. And only the limited imagination can believe that if the basic tenets of the American faith perish elsewhere in the world they will live in undiminished vitality here.

LONG AGO, William Graham Sumner pointed out that the success of a domestic tendency or policy depends upon the world-wide constellation in regard to it.

This idea of "spheres of influence" is wholly arbitrary. One can find its parallel in our business world, in the form of monopolies and agreements (among them), but nowhere in our political tradition, not even in the Monroe Doctrine.

Our viewpoint, in harmony with our faith in freedom and equality, has been that nations of people have the right to their own soil and the shaping of their own political destinies, and that the relations between them should be governed by law on the basis of equality, whether they are small or large. Thus we treat Holland or Switzerland as an equal with Germany, although the latter is immeasurably stronger than the former; nor have we ever granted the right of any nation to treat us as unequal in political, economic or intellectual intercourse with any other nation on earth.

THE MONROE DOCTRINE has been variously interpreted at various times, but even in our most imperialistic moments it has never been interpreted as our right by reason of superior numbers, wealth and force to exercise an exclusive "sphere of influence" in South America or Canada.

We have traded and enjoyed cultural and political relations with our neighbors on the same terms as everyone else, establishing as a policy only the freedom and independence from foreign control of all the American States.

THAT IS A VERY DIFFERENT thing—it is the opposite thing from dividing the world into hegemonies: Germany and her vassal Italy supreme in Europe; Japan supreme in Asia, and we—if we are able to drive a shrewd deal with the Germans—supreme in the Western Hemisphere. We do not wish supremacy, even if we were granted it, but freedom, equality and cooperation not only in the Western Hemisphere but throughout the globe.

Thus, on a world scale, the Fascist states look forward to a few interlocking monopolies, and we, if we follow our faith, must look forward to a world-wide cooperative commonwealth.

But the world outside and the world inside are intimately related. The concepts and values cultivated by monopolistic big business lead logically to the Nazi form of world order. The American dream rejects it with the spontaneity with which a healthy organism vomits poison.

The De Luxe Dole

I WISH it were possible to hold a super-colossal investigation of the whole New Deal from March 4, 1933, down to the present hour, similar to Ferd Pecora's open-air grand jury performance on the gyp bankers and promoters back there when most of us were, in a political way of speaking, very young. It is my belief that such a probe or quiz, as we would call it in the papers, would reveal such a system of larceny, white graft and fraud as the world has never known, operated in the name of democracy, and that the late Sobbing Sam Insull would measure up as nothing more than a bush league confidence man.

My first misgivings as to the purity of the New Deal occurred way back when the dew was wet on the rose when I went around to the old Postoffice in Washington and discovered our old friend Wild Will Lyons stowed away in an office of his own, with his name on the door under the title of Special Assistant to the Postmaster General. Old Will had been a traveling drummer for years and years, selling two-pants suits with pinch-back coats to the cowboys and beet fields hands out West.

HE WAS WHAT we called a character around the fight business, often to be found in Billy La Hiff's tavern, where the mob hung out after hours on fight nights at the Garden. Around Washington there had been some talk that Jim Farley was going to drop him into a job of some kind, but I thought that was just talk, and then, all of a sudden, sure enough, there was our Will with a private office in Washington, keeping the scrapbooks for Jim—just pasting up clippings.

I never did discover what his salary was and heard it estimated or guessed variously between $4,000 and $6,000 a year, but I said to myself, "Hell's Fire! There goes a lot of people's income taxes just to gratify Jim's generous impulse."

There are thousands, probably hundreds of thousands, of poor citizen stiffs around the country who have to sit down every year and fill in a lot of blanks and send a few little bucks to the Internal Revenue to pay the salaries of such appointees. Then, when they have forgotten all about it, around comes some fly cop with a briefcase and goes over the whole mess, nickel by nickel, and winds up saying he can't allow the deduction for the bum debt which has been written off and will have to stick the taxpayer $8.26 more, plus interest at 6 per cent.

WELL, Will Lyons was only one example, and a minor one at that, of the generosity of the bleeding hearts of the New Deal with money intrusted to them to bail the country out of hock. Old Theodore Bilbo, an eccentric character from Mississippi, turned up in another department, also pasting clippings in scrapbooks, at $6,000 a year because they wanted to pacify him and get him off Pat Harrison's neck.

And from that time on they just dropped pretense and yelled "Come and Get It!" and did those free-loaders come a-running! Everywhere you turned you ran into somebody you used to know, most of them either dried out drunks, simmering alcoholics or embittered flops with no excuse at all for failure except their own incompetence and inability to get along, holding jobs in the Guv'ment and drawing down people's taxes.

THIS WAS the de luxe dole, and as the Administration spread the graft increased and mystery was made of the multiplying departments and subdepartments after the manner of the swindling financiers of the old regime with their pyramids of holding companies.

The graft was spread out over the country, too, and railroad men long ago got used to the Chinese tickets or script on which swarms of busy little fuss-budgets rattle around the country, always on the cushions and always on business of great public importance, at the expense of the unknown and forgotten man—that reactionary, copper-headed tory who pays taxes. This system has become so wide and fat now that anyone who questions it is an economic royalist and sure to get a kicking around from his local collector of internal revenue, who is a New Deal politician himself, for speaking of it.

The arrogance of them is something suitable for framing, too. They are now "the Guv'ment." "Trying to make democracy work" for the masses against the greedy resistance of the pernicious reactionary, and if you add them up their pay will equal, I am confident, all the stealings of all the crooked bankers up to the time when the roof fell in.

Certainly, the system is no more honest than that of the bankers, and nobody in Washington attempts to justify it on moral grounds. They just say it is politics, and that is supposed to explain all. It does, too.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT

Although one of the most enthusiastic advocates of American imperialism in the 'nineties he came to regard the Philippines as "the Achilles heel" of the American Empire, Ernest Lindley points out in a further discussion of the German-Italian-Japanese alliance and its relation to the United States.

Power Politics

By Ernest K. Lindley

Could Japan Have Been Appeased?

SOME REPUBLICAN leaders seem tempted to make a campaign issue of the Grand Alliance. Their accusation is, in essence, that the Roosevelt Administration created this two-ocean threat by an unsympathetic attitude toward Japan.

In the cold atmosphere of power politics, appeasement is not necessarily the damnable thing which it has come to mean to more emotional and righteous observers of the trend of world events. Hitler gained inestimable benefits from appeasing Soviet Russia. We have gained inestimable benefits in Latin America from appeasing Latin-American sensibilities—by revoking the Platt amendment, which proclaimed our right to intervene by force to restore order in Cuba, by withdrawing Marines from Central American points of occupation, and by similar acts.

Whether appeasement is good or bad is a practical question.

BY AND LARGE, over the last 40 years, the Republican Party has advocated and supported American imperialism in the Far East, while the Democratic Party has opposed it. The cleavage was most marked during William Jennings Bryan's leadership of the Democrats. They advocated independence for the Philippines before Theodore Roosevelt, in a more sober second thought, realized that the Philippines were "the Achilles heel" of the American empire—because they could not be defended—and long before the sugar lobby helped to put through a Philippine Independence Act.

During 1929, under President Hoover and Secretary of State Stimson, we intervened in the dispute over the Chinese Eastern Railway, in what was then Manchuria, as if that were an area in which we had important rights. During 1931 and 1932, under the same management, we made ourselves the spearhead of opposition to Japanese expansion into Manchuria. We were brought to the verge of war with Japan over a territory in which our interests were negligible.

It was a stupid error on the part of Great Britain and France to fail to support Hoover and Stimson. Their interests on the Asiatic mainland were many times greater than ours. But their stupidity does not cancel the fact that Hoover and Stimson put us out on the end of a limb.

BETWEEN HIS ELECTION and his inauguration as President, Roosevelt indorsed the Hoover-Stimson policy. There were perhaps nothing else that he could do at that stage without notifying the Japanese that they were free to do anything they wished in China. After Roosevelt entered the White House, however, the custom of berating Japan in notes was suspended, and by 1936 the President was boasting privately that Japanese propaganda had turned away from the United States and toward Great Britain. It is fair to say, I think, that continual efforts were made to impress upon the Japanese that while we did not approve of their militaristic policies we desired to see a strong and healthy Japan.

In 1937, when the Japanese began to push into China proper, a new situation arose. We remonstrated, although we were careful not to get ahead of the British. "Parallel action" was our policy, and it was no secret that we hoped that the British could and would send six battleships and accompanying craft to Singapore. Such forces, combined with ours based on Hawaii, could have blockaded Japan and, in the opinion of our naval experts, brought her to terms. With the rising Italian menace in the Mediterranean and the rising German menace across the North Sea, the British, however, felt unable to collaborate in naval action.

With the passage of time, our hopes of the restoration of a moderate government in Japan have been disappointed. The trend has been the other way. Japan has set forth a claim to domination of all of the Far East—Manchukuo, China and of Oceania, Indo-China and Siam—and probably also, in due time, the eastern part of Siberia and perhaps India, as well.

COULD ANYONE except a gullible believer in bedtime stories believe that Japan promulgated these imperial ambitions because of anything that we said? They promulgated them and are carrying them out in spite of everything we, and others, have said. Like other expanding imperial powers, they will not be checked until they are checked by force.

Of course, the Japanese would love us now if we had said or were to say: "Swell, take everything west of Hawaii that you can get." But would they love us five or ten years from now when, having taken and absorbed that vast empire, they gazed upon the still greater riches of the Western Hemisphere?

The vital question is not whether we like the Chinese, or have missions there, or hope for more than a few million dollars' worth of business there some time in the future. It is not the rubber and tin of the East Indies or Malaya—both of which we could do without. It is not even the sharp question of race supremacy which would be raised by Japanese attack on Australia and New Zealand. It is whether, looking ahead, we want to see a vast military and naval power arise on our western flank—especially when there may be another empire, perhaps even more powerful and aggressive, on our eastern frontier. Who, in his heart, thinks that either of these great expansive movements could be stopped or softened by obsequious words?

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

The Airplane Speaks

I was born in peace and happiness.

I came in answer to a hope and for the fulfillment of an ageless dream.

Mine was the realm of the angels and the path of the stars.

I gave to man the freedom of the eagle, the joy of the lark and the spirit of winged things.

I came to lift mankind into a new grandeur of living.

I was born to widen the range of man, to bring him new adventure and show him new beauty.

I came to speed exploration, travel, discovery.

I took the flying carpet of Bagdad from the realm of fables and converted it into a thrilling reality.

I came to set man free.

I hoped to release him from the limitations and barriers of time and distance.

I was born of weary research, patient study, centuries of experiments and generations of brave crusading.

Men of peace, patience and kindliness brought me into the world.

I was christened "Progress" and "Freedom."

I was the toast of Civilization.

Men in great cities felt their hearts throb as I lifted man from the status of a groundling that he might move among the sun-tinted clouds.

In the straw huts and snow houses of far places people looked into the skies, knowing a new emotion and whispered: "Look. Look. Man now travels with the birds of the air."

A planet threw its hat into the air at my coming and cried: "Now shall mankind know the way of the angels, the course of the eagles!"

I was fathered by Aspiration and mothered by Hope.

I was the handmaiden of Joy, of Adventure, of Progress and of Man's Victory Over the Earth and Skies.

Now have I joined the fallen angels.

Now have I become a curse of Man.

Now am I Desolation, Destruction and Despair!

The peaceful creation of the Wrights and the Curtisses, I have become the warring monster of Hitler and Goering.

The frail fledgling that first left the sand dunes at Kitty Hawk, I have become the steel monster that levels commerce and culture, effaces beauty and fills a world with blackness and misery.

Once the answer to man's dream, I am the fulfillment of a Dante nightmare.

Once a thing of canvas, rattan and crude motors that lifted man off the ground for a fleeting moment of ecstasy, and opened the way for him to be a god, I am a horrible instrument of death that has plunged him lower than the beasts.

I am the instrument of Hate and Evil.

I am the right hand of Terror, Ruthlessness and Unspeakable Cruelty.

On The Fence

By Barnet Nover

Russia's Uncertain Role

AS A NATION whose territory extends all the way from the Vistula to the Pacific, Russia impinges directly both on the European and the Asiatic spheres of action of the new German-Italian-Japanese alliance.

Ostensibly that alliance is not directed against her but against the United States and Great Britain. Indeed, the Berlin Treaty goes so far as to declare that the "terms do not in any way affect the political status which exists at present as between each of the three contracting parties and Soviet Russia." A similar statement was made by Saburo Kurusu in signing the pact on behalf of Japan.

So far so good. Yet Russia cannot afford to ignore the fact that her most dangerous neighbors, east and west, are now formally allied to each other for a period of ten years and that before the ten-year period is over this alliance may take a different form.

THE CONCLUSION of the German-Italian-Japanese alliance thus compels Russia to make a major decision fraught with vast potential consequences.

Generally speaking, she can follow one of three courses. She can join the new combination; she can sit on the fence waiting for a favorable opportunity to throw her weight to one side or the other; or she can assume toward the German-Italian-Japanese combination an attitude of outright hostility.

Under existing circumstances, the latter is the least likely of the three policies open to her. A victory of Germany and Italy in Europe and of Japan in Asia might have very perilous consequences to the Soviet Union. Stalin has no reason to believe that Hitler's "new order in Europe" does not ultimately contemplate a German-dominated Ukraine or that the "new order in Greater East Asia" will not sooner or later be interpreted to mean the extension of Japanese control over Eastern Siberia, from Baikal tot he Pacific.

At the same time, however, there is no immediate danger of a conclusive German-Italian triumph in Europe or a Japanese triumph in Asia. And the more Hitler exhausts Germany's resources in attempting to destroy British resistance and the more Japan extends herself in the Far East, the longer Russia will be safe.

THE SECOND possibility—that Russia will actively join forces with the three-power combination—would also seem to be unlikely at this time.

In August, 1939, when the Ribbentrop-Molotoff pact was signed, some feared that it cloaked an actual German-Russian military alliance. Those fears have proved unfounded. What had happened was that Hitler had purchased Russian neutrality by giving Stalin a free hand in regions directly adjoining Russia's European frontiers.

Thus, except in Finland, Russia was able to make very considerable territorial gains almost without firing a shot.

UNDOUBTEDLY it would be to the interest of Germany, Italy and Japan to win Russia over to full membership in the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo bloc. Such a development, if it meant anything at all, would mean the cessation of Russian aid to China and active Russian participation in the campaign to sever Great Britain's Mediterranean-Red Sea lifeline.

For this cooperation with the Axis and Japan the Berlin bloc would no doubt be willing to pay a heavy price.

In the case of Japan that might involve a Japanese retreat from the north. But it would free the hands of the island empire for southward and westward expansion. In the case of Germany and Italy, Russia might be tempted by an offer of territory belonging to outside nations: Iran, for instance; Afghanistan, the Dardanelles. There is also Finland. There is, possibly, Sweden and northern Norway, whose possession would give Russia a long-sought window on the Atlantic. If with Russian aid the Axis could achieve a speedy triumph, the price paid to Moscow would be cheap enough. For having settled with Great Britain, Germany and Italy could then turn on Russia and compel her to disgorge what she had swallowed and more. It must be assumed, however, that Stalin is not unaware of this possibility and will look all gift horses in the mouth.

THE MOST LIKELY course Stalin can be expected to pursue at this time is that of benevolent neutrality toward the Berlin bloc. He has little to gain by openly opposing it. He has nothing to gain by joining that bloc. He has much to gain by getting Germany, Italy and Japan to extend themselves and thus steadily become weaker vis-a-vis Russia than they are today. Benevolent neutrality would, moreover, enable the Soviet government to create a new series of buffer states against the ultimate day of reckoning. For the same reason, however, this neutrality must not be so benevolent as to improve German, Italian and Japanese chances of victory in the near future.

Contract Bridge

Yesterday A. Phillips Bill presented a squeeze play; today he submits an end-play coup, with the contract at six spades, doubled. Here are the cards:

	♠ 8 5 3 ♡ A Q 10 7 6 4 ◇ A Q J ♣ 2
♠ None ♡ K 5 ◇ 10 8 7 6 4 ♣ J 10 9 5 3	NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH	♠ J 9 7 4 2 ♡ J 8 3 ◇ K 5 ♣ K 6
	♠ A K Q 10 6 ♡ 9 2 ◇ 9 3 ♣ A 7 4

West led the club jack this time, and again gave South a free finesse, though this one would have been successful in any event. The king went up, and Bill took with the ace. He ruffed a low club in dummy and returned a low spade to the ace. West showing out. He tried the finesse of the heart queen, and it held. He played the ace of hearts and trumped a low heart in his hand. Then the queen of clubs was cashed. He trumped the last club with the spade eight; East overruffed with the nine.

This play left declarer with the king, queen, ten of spades and two low diamonds; East had the jack and two small spades, and the king and one diamond. He was neatly trapped.

If he led a spade declarer would win the ten, take the king and queen, and the diamond ace would permit him to cash dummy's heart. If he led a diamond the dummy would take the jack and ace, and East was under the king, queen, ten of spades for the last three tricks. East this time conceded defeat, and declarer scored six spades, doubled, for game and rubber. He lost one trump.

The Gentler Sex

The Alibi Club

President—Now for general chairman of our benefit bridge party I'm going to appoint Mrs. Whipper——

Mrs. Whipper—Oh, but Mme. President, I simply couldn't! I havn't been a bit well, and Mr. Whipper would have a fit.

Mrs. Joyner—Oh, but you wouldn't have to do any work. You could just appoint a lot of subchairmen——

President—And you're such a wonderful organizer, Mrs. Whipper.

Mrs. Whipper—No, no really. I promised Mr. Whipper . . . Besides I may have to have something done about my gall bladder next month.

President—We-l-l then I'll appoint . . . Mrs. March——

Mrs. March—No, no, I'm so terribly busy . . . and my mother-in-law's coming . . . and I may have to have my tonsils out any minute.

President—All right then, I'll name Mrs. Joyner——

Mrs. Joyner—Just a minute, Mme. President. I'm already serving as president of the Daughters of Jezebel . . . and I'm on the board of the Broader Life League . . . and geneslogist of the Blue Blooded Matrons . . . and head of hospitality for the Merry Pals——

President—Oh . . . well, all right. Mrs. Chipp, suppose you be chairman?

Mrs. Chipp—No indeed! The last time I served as chairman there was too much criticism. Besides, people are always so funny about the money.

President—But you could have a lot of subchairmen——

Mrs. Chipp—No indeed! There are too many people who talk. Besides, I may have to go out of town.

President—Well . . . let's see. Oh, Dr. Hopper, suppose you be chairman.

Dr. Nannie B. Hopper—I'd be glad to, but I'm leaving next week to organize a political study club among the women of Bali.

President—Well somebody has to be chairman. What about you, Mrs. Piney?

Mrs. Piney—Oh Mme. President, I'm not a bit executive. And besides, if I get the least excited I always break out with neurodermatitus.

Mrs. Joyner—Mrs. Tootle would make a good chairman.

Mrs. Tootle—No, no! Mr. Tootle doesn't want me to take any responsibility this year. It makes me nervous.

President—But you could appoint a lot of subchairmen——

Mrs. Tootle—No, no! Another thing, little Fluffy's not at all well and I may have to take her to the veterinarian at any time. Besides, Mr. Tootle's going to do over the rumpus room . . . and then his niece is going to be married.

Mrs. McAddle—Why don't we just have a committee without a chairman?

Mrs. Piney—Why don't you take it, Mrs. McAddle?

President—Oh no, I-I—that is, I'm saving Mrs. McAddle for chairman of favors. She's so artistic.

Mrs. Piney—Mrs. Hazey would make a nice little chairman.

President—No, no—I-I want Mrs. Hazey to serve as chairman of handshaking. She's so gracious.

Mrs. Joyner—Well, we'll simply have to appoint someone who's not here. What about Mrs. Jay?

Mrs. Whipper—Mrs. Jay couldn't—she's—well, she's going to have a baby——

Chorus—Another!

Mrs. Whipper—Well please don't say anything about it.

Chorus—Oh no!

Mrs. Joyner—Say, I have an idea! Mrs. Wiser!

Mrs. March—Well, I happen to know that Mrs. Wiser won't be chairman. She dosen't want to be active in club work this year. That's why she stayed away today.

Mrs. Chipp—Another thing, Mrs. Wiser's so terribly busy and she has so many home responsibilities——

President—She could have a lot of subchairmen——

Mrs. Tootle—Why don't we call her up?

President—I hardly believe that would be advisable.

Mrs. March—I KNOW Mrs. Wiser won't have it.

Mrs. Joyner—I think we could talk her into it—after she's once appointed.

President—That's it! We'll just appoint Mrs. Wiser general chairman and—and will the secretary please notify her?

Stuffed Potatoes

Try this new potato idea: Bake potatoes in the usual way. When they're done, remove and mash the pulp, season it with salt, pepper, minced parsley and onion and a little cream. Beat until light and fluffy then mix in one-third as much mashed cooked carrots as potatoes. Roughly refill the potato cases, sprinkle with grated cheese and bake 10 minutes to brown.

BY THE POST FASHION EDITOR

Now that America has taken up the fashion leadership of the world, it is already establishing a tradition for beauty plus brains among the designers and experts that was never known to the style industry before. French couturiers who once dominated the silhouette trends intended for American women, may have been noted for artistry in their line but not particularly for the charm and good looks, possessed by a large number of our young America designers. As the photographs above indicate, the leaders in America's new style supremacy have the alertness, vitality and quick American tempo their clothes or dictates stand for. This shows they practice what they preach.

Mary Haworth's Mail

10 Years Ago, Woman Was Wed to Younger Man, Who Later Left Her; Now He Wants to Marry Her Again

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Ten years ago I married a man who was six years younger than I. (He is now 34 and I am 40). We lived together for two years and then he left me. Later he remarried, but after six months, his second wife left him and got a divorce. Last August, I was visiting in the city where he lives and he came to see me. He said he had learned to appreciate me as never before, and he asked for another chance.

Before he married me, he had no knowledge of women. We went together for two years and after we were married I tried to make our home a happy one. He brought his salary home to me and I was an economical manager. But he would not stay home with me of evenings and gave me little companionship. But now that he is older, I feel he would be different. I believe he sincerely wants to come back to me, and I am very lonely and need a man's love and companionship.

I have a good position and while he, too, is employed, his salary is less than mine. I have had several admirers during the years since we separated, but none that I could love. I do not love him as I once did, but I have been seeing him occasionally since last summer, and the more I am around him, the more I care for him. I believe it would be only a matter of time before I could again care as much as I did at first. He says he realizes his earlier mistake and would devote the rest of his life trying to make me happy.

I am a very modern woman and have not allowed myself to "settle." I do not look 40. I have kept young by swimming, playing tennis and associating with younger friends—and yet I don't make myself ridiculous by trying to "act young." But I am wondering if I am too much older than my former husband to hold him permanently, if we make another try. I would not resign my position if we remarried, as my income would be needed. I am tempted to go back to him. Do you think I should? Please help me decide.

LONELY DIVORCEE.

Chances of Happiness Greater Than Before

DEAR L. D.: If the difference in ages is unimportant to the man (which seems to be the case), then I cannot see that it would adversely affect your chances of making a "go" of a second marriage to him. After all, that difference is relatively much less today, both chronologically and symbolically, than it was ten years ago—when it marked the disparity between his youth and your maturity; between his blind ignorance of life and your adult self-awareness and social perspective.

If, as he says, his experiences of the last decade have given him the seasoned understanding to appreciate you as never before, then the odds seem all in your favor, of building a stable and mutually satisfying companionship with him in a second matrimonial venture. In his coming to see you last summer, in his subsequent proposal of "starting over," and in your discovery that "the more you are around him, the more you care for him"—in all this, evidence is given (it seems to me), that the original attraction had real validity, despite the fact that your initial effort to live together harmoniously came to naught.

Since you have met no other man during the past ten years for whom you could care as much; since it is, indeed, true that you "need a man's love and companship," and since, this time, you would be starting off on a rock-bottom basis of tested understanding and philosophic insulation against romantic disillusionment—my advice to you is to remarry him, with the serene conviction that you can "hold him permanently," because he was meant to be your mate, else Fate would not have washed him up on your doorstep a second time. M. H.

Correspondent Urges The Tactful Approach

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Why are you so consistently critical of your correspondents? "Sue," whose letter you published September 23, asks how to help an unsociable man friend enter into a wider, fuller social life. The tone of your reply was more scolding than constructive. You so often do this. I wonder why? It's like rebuffing a puzzled child, and certainly does not make for confidence in you . . .

Why couldn't you have reacted differently and much more tactfully? She asked you for help and you gave her a lambasting. I'm sure she must feel very hurt. In some extreme neurotic cases, this may be the correct treatment, but certainly not the helpful attitude for the general public . . . Who are you, anyway, Mary Haworth? I can guess a little from your photo topping your column, but it would be interesting to know what you think of yourself. Please tell us. Sincerely, D. D. D.

As Advocate of Tact, Why Not Employ It?

DEAR D. D.: Since you are an advocate of the "constructive" approach to situations, wouldn't it have been more in keeping with your professed philosophy to give "Sue" the benefit of such suggestions as your intelligence may devise, for helping her friend—rather than waste ammunition "scolding" me?

This column is open to all kind of comment, including the occasional brickbats directed at my essentially well-meaning head. And while I am willing to "take it," in such instances as this (for the sake of fair play), I am always most deeply grateful to those correspondents who, when dissatisfied with my remarks about a given problem, take up where I left off and say what, in their opinion, should have been said in the first place. If they can't do that, I wonder if they are justified in gratuitious criticism?

And (pardon the abrupt contradiction), I didn't lambast "Sue." I tried, simply, to show her the futulity of trying to do for the man what she obviously hasn't yet done for herself. But, in conclusion, I told her how to help herself and, incidentally, him.

As for what I think of myself—I think I am an average human being, from whom some persons expect the impossible. M. H.

Beauty Secrets

By Carolyn Abbott

Bowling Puts Roses In Your Cheeks

WOMEN who bowl regularly—and there are over 3,000,000 of them—find this sport a two-fold beauty aid. Here's why. The exercise trims the figure and whips up circulation. Since bowling increases circulation so much, the usual type of sports make-up doesn't quite click in the alley.

Only the clear natural red tones of cosmetics blend with the skin tones during increased physical activity. Orange, brown or blue tones seem brash, obvious and off key with the skin tones during a bowling game.

Coloring for the lips may be brilliant if it's a clear true red. On the cheeks, however, rouge should be lighter and so sparingly applied that you appear pale until pepped up circulation accentuates your rosy cheeks.

Nail enamels should be matched to the lips. And, rosy-hued powders are the only ones which will do your complexion justice while bowling.

It is also advisable to use a foundation cream for bowling make-up. The reason—increased circulation experienced while bowling greatly aids the process of desqumation (the shedding of dead skin cells)

October Gets Off to Flying Start With Three Large Luncheons

Speaker Rayburn Guest of Press Women; Mary-Stuart Price, Mary Glenn Honored; Mrs. Shouse, Meanwhile, Gives Small Party

By Hope Ridings Miller.

OCTOBER GOT OFF to a flying social start yesterday as official, residential, diplomatic and debutante circles gathered for three large luncheons in town, and a smaller one out in Virginia.

Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn, who, for many years, has turned down invitations to mid-day fetes anywhere except on Capitol Hill, broke his rule to be an honor guest at the luncheon of the Women's National Press Club. And a number of celebrities were on hand to see, and hear, him.

HOPE RIDINGS MILLER.

Dr. L. S. Rowe, of the Pan American Union, feted a flock of diplomats and high-ranking service officials at a luncheon for the Latin-American military representatives who came to Washington early this week. Miss Mary-Stuart Montague Price, a debutante of the season, and Miss Mary Dulany Glenn, who will make her bow in Baltimore, shared honors at a luncheon at the Shoreham Hotel; and Mrs. Jouett Shouse gathered in a group of friends for luncheon at her Virginia place, Wolf Trap Farm.

Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, looking like a fashion picture in a moss green frock worn with a sable scarf to match her trim feather turban; Mrs. Cordell Hull, whose costume was a symphony in brown; Mrs. Jesse Jones and Mrs. Morris Sheppard were among the guests who heard Speaker Rayburn's off-the-record talk.

Others introduced by Club President Helen Essary were House Majority Leader John W. McCormack, Representative and Mrs. Ewing Thomason, Mrs. Fritz Lanham, Lady Lewis, Mrs. Lionel Atwill, Mrs. William P. MacCracken, Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar.

Following Speaker Rayburn's talk, Mrs. A. Mitchell Palmer, who is in charge of decorations for ships of the United States Maritime Commission, briefly discussed her work. Still other well-known "names" among the guests were Mrs. William D. Byron, Mrs. Henry F. Grady and Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert.

Several Guests From Baltimore

Meanwhile, Dr. Rowe's luncheon—covered elsewhere on this page—was under way, and also a fete that inaugurated autumn's debutante whirl. The latter party was given by Mrs. Virgil Green Damon, of 830 Park avenue, New York, who came to the Capital, especially to fete her cousin, Miss Price, and Miss Glenn. The Louis Seize room of the Shoreham was the scene of the fete, which was attended by a company of 35. Among those from Baltimore were the Misses Eleanor Poultney, Mary Buchanan Albert, Eleanor Gary, Madeleine Fielding-Reid and her sister, Mary Fielding-Reid; Emily Taylor, Anne Shivers, Margaret Pembroke Belt, Elizabeth Cassilly and Henrietta Gittings Renshaw.

At another table were Mrs. Price's mother, Mrs. Allen Ingram Price; her sister, Mrs. George Morton Scott, of Baltimore; Mrs. Lenox Birckhead, and Mrs. Wallach Merriam.

Miss Price was attractively turned out in a black velvet jacket-dress, accented with American beauty velvet. A matching off-the-face hat and a corsage of orchids completed her costume. Miss Glenn, the daughter of Mrs. Richard Nichols, of Bernardsville, N. J., is the house guest of her grandmother, Mrs. John Barker, in Baltimore.

Double Debut For Miss Price

A double debut is scheduled for Miss Price, who will make her formal bow to society at a supper dance at the Carlton Hotel on November 9. She also will be presented at the Bachelor's Cotillon, Baltimore, on December 2. Several other parties also are being planned for her.

Mrs. Damon, the former Miss Mary Marshall Scott, of Baltimore, arrived in Washington on Monday and is the house guest of Commander and Mrs. Price. Dr. Damon, her husband, arrived last night and the two will remain here until the end of the week. Also house guests of Commander and Mrs. Price are the latter's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. George Morton Scott, of Baltimore.

Plans for this winter's Candlelight Concerts, those pleasant chamber music events that have proved so popular for seven years, were discussed at Mrs. Shouse's luncheon. Held at first in private homes, they soon expanded to a larger setting and for several seasons have been presented at the Phillips Memorial Gallery.

Guests at the luncheon yesterday included Mrs. Herbert Feis, Mrs. Emory S. Land, Mrs. Edward Finkenstaedt, Mrs. Meade Fletcher, Mrs. Harold B. Hinton, Mrs. John Sternhagen, Mrs. Elliott Thurston and Mrs. Walter White, all of whom are sponsors.

First Concert November 11

Other sponsors for the series are Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Mrs. Jasper DuBose, Mrs. Donald Richberg, Mrs. L. M. C. Smith and Mrs. Walter Nash.

The first concert will be held November 11, and the other dates are November 18 and 25 and December 16. In past seasons the programs extended through the winter, but this year all are being held before Christmas.

A Brahms sextette, with the Pro-Musica Quartette and Howard Mitchell cellist, will feature the first program. Sylvia Meyer, harpist with the National Symphony Orchestra, will be soloist for the second, playing a Caplet composition never before performed. Ralph Kirkpatrick will bring his harpsichord down from New York for the third, and details of the fourth have yet to be worked out. The concerts are held late in the afternoon in a candlelight setting, with the beautiful pictures of the Phillips Gallery gleaming dimly in the background.

CAPITAL WHIRL

By SALLY SWIFT

Small cocktail parties are still the most popular form of entertaining in Washington's early autumn season, and one of the nicest of the current crop was given the other afternoon by Llewellyn Thompson, of the State Department, at his attractive apartment on Sixteenth street. The inspiration for the gathering was Mrs. Benjamin Riggs, better known to her legion of Washington friends as "Posey." Mrs. Riggs' husband is in the foreign service and is stationed at Port Said which, with the war being carried into the Mediterranean Sea, is not a very restful spot at the moment. So Mrs. Riggs is spending the winter in Philadelphia, where her children are in school, and hopes to see as much as possible of the Capital by coming down for visits. The other afternoon she looked very smart in black and was wearing the most fascinating gold earrings in the form of little arrows which seemed to have been shot right through the lobes of her ears.

Mr. Thompson's drawing-room is spacious, with old-fashioned, high ceilings and an enormous open fire-place and, of course, trust a bachelor, really comfortable furniture. Our host made the drinks himself and passed delicious little canapes and sandwiches while finding time to talk to everyone as if he weren't busy at all.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Pell came by in evening clothes on the way to the farewell dinner party which they were giving for his daughter at the Carleton and were told that they added glamour to the party, being so dressed up. Attractive Helen Davis was there wearing a becoming hat like a huge green halo. Some one wondered if a green halo meant you were a green saint, just making your debut into sainthood. Helen is giving up the apartment which she leased for the summer months and will return to the family roof now that the Dwight Davis' house is being opened for the winter.

Other guests were Countess van Rechteren Limpurg, Mrs. Anthony Rumbold, Mrs. Hugh Cumming jr., Mrs. Anthony Coleby and Rebecca Wellington. A bachelor, newly arrived in Washington, is Jake Beam, who has taken an apartment in the same house with "Tommy" Thompson and was lending his own drawing-room across the hall for a cloak room. Mr. Beam has been stationed at the U. S. Embassy in Berlin for a number of years and is now doing a tour at the State Department. Other extra men, and that tag is far more important than it sounds, were Samuel Reber, Ogden Hammond jr., Robert Coe, Stephanus Morris, and Robert Buell.

FRIENDS GATHERED at the apartment of Count and Countess Lasocki the other cocktail-time wish Godspeed to M. and Mme. Guy Dal Piaz and to present them with a gift in remembrance of their stay in Washington. They have returned to New York to make a new life for themselves, their old one having crumbled with the fall of France, but they promised, almost tearfully, to return to their friends here as often as possible.

Countess Lasocka, whose mother arrived from Europe about two Clippers ago, had just received news of her brother in an unexpected way. A newspaper clipping showed Polish officers fighting with the British in England and her brother was among them, more handsome than all the rest.

Among those saying good-by to M. and Mme. Dal Piaz were Capt. and Mme. Pierre Benech, Mme. Weiser, M. and Mme. Charles Lucet, Counters Baillet-Latour, Baron Baeyens, whose good spirits cheer up even a farewell party, Jacques Truelle, Jacques Dumaine and Sherry McAdam.

Letters from Keith Officer headed "over the Pacific" announce his safe arrival in Los Angeles by plane, his take-off for Japan by Clipper "in bright sunshine above a smooth sea," and his regret at leaving his friends in America.

Mrs. Marion Warburg has arrived in Washington after a summer spent out West and has opened her house on Tracy Place for the winter.

Mrs. Sydney Cloman and Miss Josephine Patten, who have been vacationing in California, are expected in Washington on Friday or Saturday.

Ruth Hopkins Mitchell Wed to E. G. Montgomery

Mrs. Edith Mitchell, of 75 Howe street, New Haven, Conn., announces the marriage of her daughter, Ruth Hopkins, to Edison Garrett Montgomery, of Pasadena, Calif., and Washington.

The ceremony took place September 28 at 4:30 o'clock in the Lincoln Chapel, of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church here.

Latin-American Military Aides Feted Here; Off Today for An Inspection of U. S. Defenses

Reception Is Given By Chief of Staff and Mrs. George Marshall

AFTER A WHIRL of parties—crowded into the day—the Latin-American military representatives will be off today on an inspection tour. Yesterday afternoon the Chief of Staff and Mrs. George Marshall entertained at a reception in their honor followed by a stag dinner at the Mayflower at which the General was host. Earlier in the afternoon the visitors from the south were feted at a luncheon at the Pan American Union given by the Director General, Dr. Leo S. Rowe.

A military review was held at Fort Myer at 4:15 o'clock, preceding the party given by the Marshalls in their quarters at the fort. Mrs. Henry Stimson, wife of the Secretary of War, received with Mrs. Marshall in the drawing room—abloom with fall flowers. Mrs. Marshall was attractively gowned in a flame-colored cocktail gown of sheer wool. The mauve band encircling the waist was matched by a cluster of orchids pinned at the neckline. Missing from yesterday's party was Mrs. Marshall's daughter, Miss Molly Pender Brown, who is spending the winter in New York.

A new arrival, pouring at the tea table, was Mrs. Joseph Patterson, wife of the Assistant Secretary of War. Also pouring were Mrs. William Bryden, Mrs. Sherman Miles and Mrs. W. W. Gordon, wife of Col. Gordon, the new commandant of Fort Myer.

Several Notables Assist Hostess

A bevy of ladies was on hand to assist the hostess, including Mrs. Emory S. Adams, Mrs. H. H. Arnold, Mrs. R. C. Moore, Mrs. J. A. Crane, Mrs. Orlando Ward, Mrs. F. R. Mickelsen, Mrs. J. F. Collins, Mrs. Claude M. Adams, Mrs. W. B. Smith and Mrs. W. T. Sexton.

Headed by the Ambassador of Peru, Don Manuel de Freyre y Santander, all chiefs of missions, whose countries are represented in the military tour, attended the dinner given by Gen. Marshall at the Mayflower last evening.

Among the visiting military representatives—who also attended Dr. Rowe's luncheon earlier in the day—at the dinner party were Gen. Felipe Rivera and Lieut. Col. Victor Acosta, of Bolivia; Gen. Luis M. Castaneda, Lieut. Col. Ernesto Buena-Ventura, Lieut. Col. German Ocampo and Maj. Hernando Mora, of Colombia; Col. Manuel Rodriguez Tora and Col. Guillermo Guardia Mora, of Costa Rica; Lieut. Col. Antonio Leyba Pou and Maj. Frank Felix Miranda, of the Dominican Republic; Maj. Gen. Rodolfo A. Mendoza and Lieut. Col. Enrique Peralta, of Guatemala; Gen. Leonidas Pineda and Gen. Calixte Carias, of Honduras; Lieut. Col. Rogelio Fabrega and Capt. German Lemm, of Panama; Col. Felipe de la Barra and Lieut. Co. Jose M. Tamayo, of Peru, and Inspector Gen. Marcelino Bargallo and Lieut. Col. Escar D. Gestide, of Uruguay.

Rafael Trujillo Among Guests

Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles attended both the luncheon and dinner as did a number of high-ranking Army officers. Nelson Rockefeller, Council of National Defense, was included in the list of luncheon guests, as was Gen. Rafael Trujillo, of the Dominican Republic.

Last night's dinner was served in the east room of the hotel, the distinguished company being seated at a large horseshoe-shaped table. The national colors were carried out in the table decorations of red gladioli and carnations, white dahlias and pompoms and blue delphinium. Music was played by an orchestra from the Army Band.

Following the tour the Latin American visitors plan to return to Washington for a brief stay before continuing on to the Panama Canal Zone.

Sister of Monticello Chapter Regent Writes About Current Life in Britain

SOME IDEA of what life now is like in England is given in a letter recently received by Mrs. Leo Kasehagen, regent of Monticello chapter of the D. A. R., from her sister, Mrs. Carpenter Holland-Griffith, who is a member of the Walter Hines Page Chapter over there.

Mrs. Griffith told of the constant work in relief and for the Red Cross being done by the chapter members there and expressed gratitude for the splendid response of the D. A. R. chapters of America with contributions for the Ambulance Service of the English chapter.

Mrs. Griffith's estate, known as early as the thirteenth century as Biddenham Close, was built on the original site of an ancient government house. She has been giving the abundant fruit, vegetables and flowers grown there to refugee houses nearby. One she described as a large brick building, furnished to house old men and women from Harwich, Dover and Parkstone, coastal danger zones.

She spoke of her sister-in-law who is in the air battle district of London and who has sent her two small children to a relative in Deerfield, Mass. The children's father had a narrw escape in Portsmouth when an airplane factory suffered a direct hit, she said, but, as the roof had been reinforced, there were no injuries.

Mrs. Griffith also quoted from a letter written to her the middle of August by a friend in London who is the wife of a former consul to Spain. In the light of recent developments, it has added interest.

"I have thought of you and wondered if you have sampled your steel shelter yet," wrote the friend. "For your sake, I hope not. Yesterday, the siren started up, but mercifully, we were not long in the shelter. This morning I had only finished having my hair done when the sound went again. However, the premises had a shelter so there I stuck until the all clear was given when I hopped into a taxi and came home to lunch. What a life of emotions!

"I suppose we must expect it hot and strong else what will that ——— tell his flock when he promised faithfully to let them make merry at Brighton in August and he go to Buckingham Palace.

"The various British colonies in Spain are packed and ready for what may come. Franco won't go go to war but his pro-Nazi brother-in-law may plunge the country into it," she added.

Mrs. Griffith inclosed in her letter a poem clipped from the Bedford Record characterizing the present food situation. One verse read:

I remember, I remember when times were not so rough,
When butter was real butter and one could get enough;
When 'twas spread on bread quite thickly and the pats were round and large,
But now I have to scrape it on and find that it is "marge."

Other verses refer cheerfully to the rationing of sugar, meat and tea and the poem winds up:

I remember, I remember our grand past history's tales,
Which taught me that, when all seemed lost, Old England never fails.
Recalling such heroic deeds, who dare write of defeat?
I know, when Germany is "out" we'll still be on our feet.

GENEROUS RELIEF GIFT—The coordinating committee of the District Federation of Women's Clubs, headed by Mrs. John T. Lucker and Mrs. LeVerne Beales, recently announced that $1,641.79 has been sent by the federation treasurer, Mrs. Henry Fenno Sawtelle, to the British war relief society. The amount represents the proceeds of the recent garden fete sponsored by the federation at the British Embassy and additional sums, coming in from clubs which have not yet reported, probably will bring the total to nearly $1,700.

With this contribution made, the committee is now preparing for a large benefit ball in November for the war relief fund of the American Red Cross. This will be the third activity sponsored by the committee. The first, a fair at the Women's City Club, was also for the Red Cross.

HADASSAH TEAS—The Washington Chapter of Hadassah, cooperating in the nation-wide membership campaign of the organization, will sponsor the first of a series of number-bring-a-member teas October 14 at the home of Mrs. Garfield I. Kass, 1612 Buchanan street. Mrs. Edward Sonneborn and Mrs. Joseph Low will be in charge of reservations.

Another will be given October 29 at the home of Mrs. Bernard L. Wilner, 2938 Twenty-eighth street, October 29, with Mrs. Joel Kaufmann and Mrs. Paul R. Wilner in charge of reservations.

Miss Johnston Becomes Bride

Donegan officiated at the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an ivory satin gown with a lace veil. She carried a bouquet of lillies of the valley and gardenias.

Complexion and Hosiery Should Be in Harmony

Slim, Short Skirts Necessitate Careful Choice of Stockings, Says Elizabeth Arden; Should Be One Shade Darker Than Skin

By Marshall Adams
The Post Fashion Editor.

DO your hose and complexion harmonize or do you get the feeling of a battle for supremacy going on between legs and face?

This is a question of moment to women who consider their costumes from every angle.

MARSHALL ADAMS

Since legs make up about one-third of the composite portrait of one's anatomy, certainly as much time should be devoted to selection of hosiery as to cosmetic colors.

An advocate of this theory is Miss Elizabeth Arden, beauty expert who arrived in Washington from New York to assist in the celebrations attending the formal "opening" of a local store. As gay and buoyant as ever, Miss Arden had some practical suggestions about the harmony of a costume as a whole, so important this year with the short, slim, simple dress focusing attention equally on face and legs.

Choose Hosiery Carefully

Be as considerate of your hosiery choice as of your make-up," Miss Arden cautions. "Since rich, deep jewel tones are of prime interest in fall and winter styles, relate these tones throughout. Newest jewel tints include sapphire, ruby, emerald, aquamarine and topaz. Sapphire lipsticks possess a bluish jewel tint which harmonizes with hose having a pale orchid or pinky blue cast. Ruby-red lips and a paler cast for cheeks combine charmingly with flesh pink hose."

"Naturally the jewel-toned make-up does not demand green hose, but greenish-gray eye shadow and mascara can be subtly complemented by those with a soft gray caste. The same is true of topaz and aquamarine make-ups: Tawny gol d or topaz tinted hose correspond with burnt-sugar cosmetic tones; opal blue eye shadows with hose having a blue-gray cast."

One Infallible Rule

Miss Arden gives one infallible rule in harmonizing skin and hosiery tints. "Always choose your hose one shade darker than your skin tone but in the same key. The slight contrast in depth will make face and hands that much fairer in comparison." The costume should not have the final and positive bearing on hosiery selection, Miss Arden feels. The criterion should be natural skin tones and complexion peculiarities. Thus the woman of very fair skin must keep her legs looking that way, even though she is "going in" for deep chocolate browns and taupes. A general complexion key might include: Renair pink powders for the light blonde; beige for the redheads; blonde; rose rachel for the olive rachel for the prematurely gray, and correspondingly darker beige tones for the light, middling and darker brunettes.

As usual, Miss Arden was a perfect illustration of what she preached—tiny, chic and poised in a black wool costume suit, splendid gold jeweled clip and belt as solitary accents. Her quaint coachman's hat, by Walter Florell, was of emerald green with lush roses and blue sapphire ribbons and veiling, a vivid setting for her blonde; rose beige for the redhead; eye shadow. Her sheer hose echoed these jewel tones with a faint, pale repetition of tints.

A WOMAN'S

WASHINGTON

By JEAN BROWNELL

Now Is the Time to Start Collecting Music Manuscripts, Says Mrs. Selden-Goth

If you contemplate making a hobby of musical manuscripts, this is the time to do it. Mrs. Gisella Selden-Goth, owner of a small but choice manuscript collection, says that prices are one-third what they were a few years ago, and invaluable items are gathering dust in dealers' shops for lack of buyers. Well known as composer and music critic, she took up her hobby because of her fondness for a Bach "Prelude and Fugue." She learned that the original manuscript was for sale and determined to make it the nucleus of a collection. She now owns a Mozart fugue, a Chopin impromptu, songs by Schubert and Brahms and other musical masterpieces, but none which she considers the equal of that first purchase.

Hungarian by birth, she moved to Germany after her marriage, to Italy after her husband's death and to America "when Europe was kidnaped." She still owns a home in Florence and a summer place on the Elba, but doubts whether she ever will return to Italy. A Washington resident for the last two years, she plans to make her home in New York, with her daughter, a dancer.

SHOPPING AROUND—Shopping for a handbag, a girl was delighted to find a large red purse which was just what she wanted. She was even more delighted when she unwrapped her package at home and discovered the bag contained 70 cents.

Entraining at Union Station for a junket into West Virginia, a traveler complained to the conductor about the decrepit condition of the day coach. "It's turrible, miss," he agreed dolefully. "And this is one of our worst trains—stops every place along the line, and some places twice." . . . A porter on the Capitol Limited marvels at the forgetfulness of womankind. At the end of a recent Chicago-Washington run, he collected six hat boxes from the luggage racks, and all six contained hats.

AT THE SWITCHBOARD—Telephone operators lend tone to the Department of Agriculture with their crisp response: "'Culture!" Burlesque fans will grieve to hear that the Gayety Theater's backstage telephone has been disconnected . . . Few laundry firms can equal the dash with which one local company's switchboard girls answer calls: "This is the Palace!"

TALE OF THE TIMES—A large lady was backing out of a taxi on F street, apparently engaged in a violent argument with the driver. The altercation did not concern the fare, however. As she shook her fist at him for the last time, she said, ". . . and you know who got us into this mess? Woodrow Wilson!"

Eye Exposure

After exposure to wind and dust your eyes tell the tale. Take that tired look away by a simple exercise. Keep staring at something about forehead level. Without taking the eyes off the object, swing your head to the extreme right and then left. Do it a few times at first and increase as you go along. It takes but a few minutes and your whole expression is rejuvenated.

Bottom Soft Coal Price Put in Effect

Ickes Proclaims At Mine Minimum; Retail Rise Foreseen

By the Associated Press

Secretary Ickes officially declared minimum soft coal prices effective yesterday and called upon the Nation to support them.

They became law at 12:01 a. m., along with marketing rules and regulations on which public hearings began in 1937 when Congress passed the Bituminous Coal Act.

"Congress has determined," Ickes said, in a formal statement addressed to the coal industry, labor and the public, "that it is not unfair to ask the people of the United States to pay at least the cost of production for their coal . . . and the Government expects to enforce these minimum prices effectively and impartially."

Officials said that "cost of production" prices would add an average of 11 cents a ton, or about $44,000,000 annually, to prices at the mine.

Ickes said that without the new law, the soft coal industry and the 2,000,000 persons in 30 States dependent on it for a livelihood would be subjected to continued insecurity and substandard living conditions. He said that price cutting and unfair trade practices had weakened the capital structure of bituminous mining companies in the past and had led to the preventable waste of "hundreds of millions" of tons of coal "which the Nation can not afford to lose."

Producers now may not sell soft coal at the mines at less than the minimum prices. These, officials said, will range from 60 cents a ton on certain Indiana slack to $3.25 on high grade Washington Western lump. The law does not limit the price which producers may get from the wholesale distributor nor does it set the retail price to consumers.

Veterans Told Of Subversion In High Places

Retired Major Includes White House in Talk Before Military Order

Broadsides were leveled at subversive agents in this country yesterday by two members of the Military Order of the World War at the order's convention. One included the "White House and Federal Government" in his allegations.

In the midst of discussion of a proposal for Americanism schools for Army and Navy recruits, Maj. William M. Coffin, of Cincinnati, declared a "paganistic philosophy" pervaded the Administration "from top to bottom, including the White House."

Asked later if paganistic signified communistic, the officer said listeners were free to make that interpretation of his remarks.

Earlier in the session Rear Admiral Adolphus Staton, U. S. N., retired, declared domestic "cancers" blocked the way for the "clear the ship for action" command from defense chiefs.

Elaborating on the "cancer" statement, Staton described a conversation with a Navy Yard commander. The latter had said there were more than 100 Communists at work at his base and declared he was powerless to remove them.

Responding to the admiral's query, "What are we going to do about it?" Lieut Comdr. Charles Mills, U. S. N., retired, of Miami, commander in chief of the World War officers organization, appointed a committee to consider resolutions hitting red activity in this country.

At a banquet last night, concluding the convention, Lieut. Comdr. Mills introduced members of the organization. Constantine Brown, columnist, spoke.

Employment Security Leaders Of Nation Open Parley Here

From the 48 States and the District, men responsible for administering the Nation's unemployment compensation and public employment services gathered yesterday at the Mayflower Hotel for the fourth Interstate Conference of Employment Security Agencies.

Sessions, continuing through Friday, will be devoted to the development and coordination of State programs, with special emphasis on problems relating to national defense. John S. Stump, jr., of West Virginia, is president of the conference.

Following registrations yesterday, the meeting heard V. C. Phelan, president of the International Association of Public Employment Service, discuss plans for establishing a system of unemployment insurance in Canada.

The Canadian government enacted unemployment insurance laws last month following permission for such legislation from the British Parliament, Phelan said. A dominion-wide scheme to establish regional unemployment offices is now in the making, he added.

Highlight of the conference is expected at a dinner meeting tonight when John G. Winant, former Governor of New Hampshire and now director of the International Labor Office, will speak on "Social Security in a World of War." His talk, it was pointed out, is regarded in social welfare fields as of great importance because little is known here of what happened to social security programs in war-stricken countries.

Other addresses touching on social security in war and national defense will be made by Murray Latimer, chairman, Railroad Retirement Board; A. J. Altmeyer, chairman, Social Security Board, and Ewan Clague, director, Bureau of Employment Security.

Representatives of the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations are scheduled to speak tomorrow.

Willkie's Stand On Power Called Inconsistent

Portland, Oreg., Oct. 1 (AP).—Wendell L. Willkie's utterances on public power were described as inconsistent by Henry A. Wallace, Democratic Vice Presidential candidate, in a campaign address tonight.

Recalling that Willkie said that "it seems inconceivable that anyone would suggest that these projects (Bonneville and Grand Coulee dams and power plants in the Columbia River) should not be completed," Wallace said:

"On the other hand, three years ago in a bill filed in Federal court in Tennessee he prayed that the court 'shall . . . enjoin the defendants . . . from . . . constructing works for the purpose of creating a supply of electric power for use in carrying on a Federally owned electric public utility.' The effect of this injunction, I may say, would have been to leave some of the TVA construction incomplete and a dead loss to the taxpayers."

D.C. Heads Plan Pre-Marital Test Study

District Commissioner J. Russell Young said late yesterday the desirability of a premarital blood test law for the Capital will be taken up at the Commissioners' weekly board meeting Friday.

Earlier in the day Dr. George C. Ruhland, health officer, had submitted to the municipal heads, for their consideration, a proposed bill requiring applicants for marriage licenses to undergo syphilis diagnostic tests. Twenty States, including Virginia, now have such a law, though its provisions are not uniform in all jurisdictions.

Dr. Ruhland acted after conferring yesterday forenoon with Charles S. Zurhorst, whose resignation this week from the Board of Trade led to exhumation of the premarital blood test issue, which waxed brightly two years ago and then was put to sleep in the District Building—according to Zurhorst.

Zurhorst quit the Board of Trade, whose health committee he had served, in protest against the group's tolerating inaction on the proposed law after it had indorsed such legislation.

Explaining his resignation, Zurhorst said yesterday:

"My entire efforts while a member of the Board of Trade were turned toward an attempt to secure legislation in the District of Columbia which would help prevent the spread of venereal diseases. In this I was fortunate enough to have the board back my proposed bill, but was completely discouraged when that bill was allowed to lie dormant on the desk of Dr. George Ruhland, District health officer, for a period of one and one-half years."

The bill which Dr. Ruhland has submitted to the Commissioners for their approval is reported to have been shaped by Bascom Johnson, associate director of the American Social Hygiene Association.

David Rhodes, Eastern High, Named Cadet Corps Colonel

David A. Rhodes, 16-year-old Eastern High School senior, who was a corporal last session, yesterday became colonel and highest cadet officer of the Washington High School Cadet Corps.

Rhodes won the competitive examination Monday when each of seven white high schools sent its outstanding cadet before the examining board. Col. W. M. Craigie, professor of military science and tactics for these schools, said the examination is a "severe test" for commander of the brigade, which numbered 2,083 at the last count. Its size is expected to increase materially this session because of emphasis on national defense.

As cadet colonel, Rhodes will make two annual inspections of the cadet units in each of the high schools and will play a leading part in civic parades and ceremonies. He has made an outstanding scholastic record at Eastern High School.

Col. Craigie, with the faculty military instructors (reserve officers) from the various high schools, formed the examining board which at Central High School Monday interviewed the boys competing for the honor. They were judged on "their general understanding of the duties, knowledge of certain phases of military science, their leadership and other qualities," Col. Craigie said.

Lower Fares In Suburban Area Planned

W. M. A. Motor Lines And Capital Transit Join in Proposal Filed With P. U. C.

A closer working arrangement between the Capital Transit Co. and the Washington, Marlboro & Annapolis Motor Lines, which services residents of South and East Washington, to improve service at a lower cost to the consumer was presented yesterday to the Public Utilities Commission.

The suburban line, which primarily services Maryland residents, has been permitted to do intra-District business east of Minnesota avenue, but residents of that part of the city have stated they are "discriminated against" because they must pay a 10-cent fare on the suburban bus and if they want to go beyond the terminal at Eleventh street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest, they must pay the Capital Transit Co. another fare.

The proposal, which was presented jointly by the two companies, would offer those riders the same 10-cent fare to Barney Circle, Seventeenth street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast, and would be provided with a free transfer to the Capital Transit service to any point in the city. If the same rider wanted to terminate his trip at Barney Circle, the fare would be 5 cents.

Other transfer points besides Barney Circle would be at Branch and Pennsylvania avenues to accommodate riders destined for Hillcrest, and at Pennsylvania and Minnesota avenues for riders to Anacostia, Skyland and Kenilworth, all in Southeast Washington.

Under the new proposal the suburban line would have its terminal at Barney Circle. The transit company is now building a terminal at the circle at a cost of $5,000.

The commission is expected to act on the new proposal within a week.

Residents along the suburban line in the District, under the present arrangement have express service to Eleventh street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest, for 10 cents. Under the proposal he would have to make a change at Barney Circle. Going home from the downtown area, the rider would either pay 10 cents, a token, or his pass, and then would have to pay an additional 2 cents for a transfer to the suburban line, provided his ride terminated in the District. New rates are scheduled for the Maryland rider who would go from any point in the city to Barney Circle and then pick up the suburban line. In general, however, he would receive a better rate for the service.

HERALD COMING OF ROSH HASHANAH—Cantor Boris Schifman, world noted, shown at Slichoth services at Chev Sholm Synagogue, Fifth and I streets northwest, where he will canduct Maariv services tonight and Rosh Hashanah rites tomorrow and Friday

Two world-famed cantors—Adolph Vygoda and Boris Schiffman—will be among leaders of Maariv services today at sundown in synagogues, as Rosh Hashanah, the Jewish New Year 5701, begins.

Garbed in white caps and robes worn only during Rosh Hashanah, the cantors will return to houses of worship early tomorrow morning to raise the shofar (ram's horn) to their lips, sounding a call for repentence and reflection.

Rosh Hashanah, observed for one day by Reformed Jews and two days in orthodox and conservative congregations, is climaxed in Yom Kippur (Day of Atonement), ten days later. The period is one of penitence.

Services tomorrow and Friday are divided into the three parts of Malchroth, Zichronoth and Shofroth, with 30 shofar blasts at the end of each section, and ten final blows.

Special skill is required in handling the shofar, blown either by the reader or cantor of the congregation, who intersperses three tunes—the Tkeeah, Schvorim and Truah—between the rabbi's reading of Old Testament passages. Each tune bears special significance, the Tkeeah meaning allegiance to the prophets; the Schvorim, a prayer for other prophets and the Truah, a direct appeal to God.

Meanwhile, Jewish families last night were busy preparing New Year delicacies and sweetmeats, such as honey, symbolizing a sweet and pleasant New Year. Wine for Kiddish (sanctification of the holy day) and two white loaves of finely wrought chaloths for blessing at the festive board also were on hand.

Cantor Schiffman, formerly member of the Chicago Civic Opera Company, assisted by a famous New York double symphonic choir under Joseph Lebow's direction, will conduct the services at Ohev Sholom Synagogue, Fifth and I streets northwest, today at 5 p. m., and at 8 a. m. on Thursday and Friday. Rabbi Zemach Green is spiritual leader.

Former European Cantor Vygoda will conduct his first high holiday services in America at Beth Sholom-Talmud Torah Congregation, Eighth and Shepherd streets, with which he is now affiliated, tonight, tomorrow and Friday. Rabbi Moshe H. Levinson will speak.

In cooperation with the Hebrew Sisters' Aid Society and the Jewish Welfare Board, Rabbi Hirsch Z. Clickman, of the People's Ethical Synagogue, will conduct holiday rites for Jewish patients at St. Elizabeths Hospital tonight, at 6 and tomorrow at 9:30 a. m.

With Maurice Maser in charge, Maariv rites will be held tonight at 5:30 at the Hebrew Home for the Aged, 1125 Spring road northwest, and tomorrow and Friday at 8:30 a. m. Rabbi Julius Loeb will preach.

Morris Wishnovsky, leader of spiritual work at the Hebrew Travelers' Sheltering Society, 407 Massachusetts avenue northwest, will conduct Maariv services there tonight at 6 p. m., and tomorrow and Friday at 9 a. m.

16th St. Group Asks Extension Of Underpass

Commissioners Hear Protests on Scott Circle Tunnel Plan

A proposal to continue the Massachusetts avenue underpass from Thomas Circle through Scott and Dupont Circles was presented yesterday to the District Commissioners by the Sixteenth Street Citizens Group.

The citizens committee appeared before the Commissioners to protest a plan to tunnel Sixteenth street under Scott Circle.

E. Hilton Jackson, chairman of the board of trustees of the First Baptist Church, led the delegation and produced a statement by a Baltimore engineering firm which estimated the cost of the Massachusetts avenue tunnel under Scott Circle at $500,000 and the tube under Sixteenth street at $400,000.

Frank B. Steele, chairman of the citizens committee and secretary general of the Sons of the American Revolution, which has its headquarters on Sixteenth street at Scott Circle, asked the Commissioners to postpone their final decision. He said the question of an underpass is one "that affects every citizen of the City of Washington and not merely the property owners on Sixteenth street or Massachusetts avenue."

Howard P. Phillips, owner of the Presidential Apartments, Sixteenth and N streets, emphasized an underpass in the line of Sixteenth street would "forever eliminate the proposal that some day there be a continuous through way from Thirteenth street to Twenty-first street, devoid of all intersections."

Following the meeting, the Commissioners said they would ask Director of Highways H. C. Whitehurst to submit further estimates on the cost of the proposed underpass.

U. S. W. V. to Celebrate 'Maryland Night'

"Maryland Night" will be celebrated tonight at 8 by the United Spanish War Veterans and Ladies Auxiliary in Pythian Temple, 1012 Ninth street northwest.

D. C. Subway With Air Raid Shelters Urged

Columbia Heights Citizens Association Proposes Project

A subway system with air-raid shelters, "to relieve the District's dangerous traffic situation, as a refuge from air attacks and to provide work for the unemployed," was urged in a resolution adopted unanimously by Columbia Heights Citizens Association last night.

A more militant attitude of District citizens in demanding suffrage was urged by Sefton Darr, former president of the District Bar Association, in an address at the meeting. Along with their efforts to further the national defense program, District citizens should seek their rights as protection against bearing an undue burden of taxation and other possible economic changes resulting from the emergency, he said.

The association adopted an eight-point program for 1940-41, including continuance of the fight for suffrage. "We do not favor and are not interested in the reorganization of the District government until we are granted suffrage, at which time we can reorganize to suit ourselves," the program stated. Another point "to advocate and fight for District people, who know the people's needs, for District jobs."

The association indorsed its president, Col. Luther R. Maddox, for commissioner on the Public Utilities Commission, the post vacated by the resignation of Richmond B. Keech. The association met at the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church.

D.C.-Virginia Boundary Bill Revived

Rep. Nichols Begins Move to Bring National Airport In Local Jurisdiction

A move to bring the Washington National Airport clearly within the jurisdiction of the District was started yesterday by Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, as he succeeded in reviving a pigeon-holed bill to establish a District-Virginia boundary.

A public hearing will be held at 10:30 o'clock this morning by a subcommittee of the House District Committee, headed by Representative Hunter (Democrat), of Ohio.

Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, upon being informed of the hearing, notified Abram B. Staples, jr., attorney general of Virginia, and Col. W. D. Battle, director of the Virginia division of motor vehicles, and advised them to attend the hearing.

Smith said he understood that the question of gasoline taxes was at stake and that the oil companies were attempting to avoid the 5-cent Virginia tax. Representative Nichols at first called attention to the tax differential between the District and Virginia and later said he understood that the gas taxes are refunded.

Because the new airport partially filled in by the Federal government, the Virginia-District boundry would divide the airport were it to follow the mean high-water mark proposed in a bill introduced May 31 by Representative Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, at the request of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Nichol's amendment would alter the bill so that the boundary would run below the airport throughout, regardless of the mean high-water mark.

The Randolph bill, though referred to a sub-committee several months ago, was held up upon complaint of Virginia authorities that various private claims in Alexandria had not been adjudicated. Representative Smith said yesterday that he thought most of these have been adjusted.

What action is taken on the 100-year-old boundary dispute must be approved by the Virginia Legislature before it becomes operative. Alued to meet until 1942, Nichols inthough the Legislature is not scheddicated that a special session might be called if the boundary bill passes Congress.

During an earlier hearing the commission said the "inadequate and discriminatory" character of the service could be corrected by (1) extension of the Capital company's service on Pennsylvania avenue to Alabama avenue, thence on Alabama avenue to a turn-around in the vicinity of Hillside, of (2) a transfer arrangement between the Capital company and the suburban line.

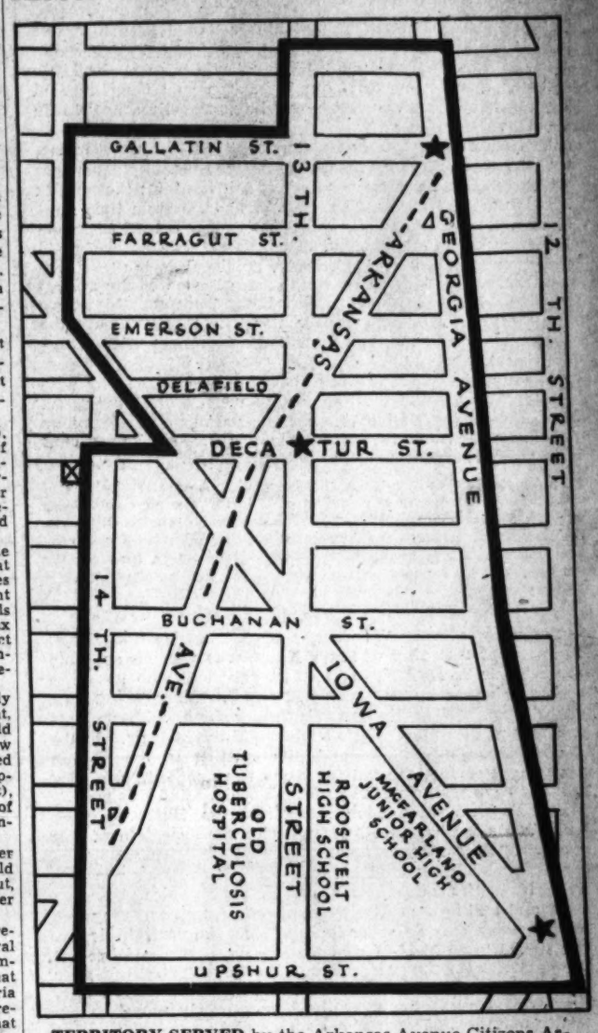
Arkansas Ave. Citizens Came After Rains to Procure Sewers



TERRITORY SERVED by the Arkansas Avenue Citizens Association. Meeting place is marked by the cross at Decatur and Fourteenth streets northwest. Stars show some of the places the association wants traffic lights installed. The water main, which caused formation of the association, runs down Arkansas avenue (broken line).

This is the third article in a series about citizens' associations in the District, and their efforts to make the community a better place in which to live.

One of the District's youngest citizens' associations, the Arkansas Avenue Community Association, was formed in September, 1939, after a severe rainstorm flooded cellars of residents in the Thirteenth and Arkansas avenue northwest area, resulting in a mass meeting of dampened citizens.

At that meeting, residents decided to form an organization which would see that flood sewers were installed in the community. They did, and the Arkansas Avenue Association was born.

Since then, the citizens' unit has acquired more than 300 members, storm sewers have been built, and the association has planned a vigorous program for the coming year, featuring other far-raching improvements in the community.

Plans for this season, to be expounded at the first fall meeting this month, include drives to place Wilson Teachers College at the site of the old Tuberculosis Hospital, Fourteenth and Upshur streets northwest; to reroute empty buses off Arkansas avenue, to remove overhead wires and poles of utility companies, to provide ample pistol range facilities for neighborhood police, and to obtain proper traffic lights at several neighborhood intersections.

President of the association is Hugh V. Keiser, of 4807 Arkansas avenue northwest. Keiser, who is also president of the M. S. Ginn Co., is active in many business and social groups and is almost—but not quite—a native Washingtonian, having lived here since the age of 2 months.

Little Cooks Its Plans For 'The Baker's Wife'

Redecorated House Opens French Film the 15th; Young Larry Nunn Makes Promising Entrance; Glenn Miller Adds 11 P. M. Shows at Earle

By Richard L. Coe

Substituting for Nelson B. Bell.

"THE BAKER'S WIFE," that highly-touted French film of which The Post's Dorothy Thompson has already said "Once in a blue moon one sees such a picture," will open at the Little Theater Tuesday evening, the 15th, at a gala benefit. And by the time it gets here there will be practically a new Little Theater.

The regular engagement will open the following morning, two weeks from today, at what the Little reluctantly announces will be a slight advance in prices and it is slight: the regular .28 scale until 1 p. m.; .39 until 5:30 and .55 from then until closing. Altogether this means less time for the .28 scale and 11 cents more in the evening. The Little people fervently add that the upping is for this film only. And considering its eighth months in New York and a smash from Boston to the several hundred houses of the Fox West Coast Theaters, this seems like a reasonable concession for a picture that was none too easy to bargain for. Of the benefit opening, more after everything's set.

Raimu is the star of this tale about a village baker with wife trouble. John Erskine wrote the titles and edited the piece. It's enjoyed superlatives from such various cognoscenti as Albert Einstein and that chap whom Westbrook Pegler calls "the gent's room journalist," Walter Winchell.

As for the Little's face-lifting, it's being done gradually—inside and out. Already the new booth equipment is in and the air conditioning apparatus is being rearranged. The new decoration scheme will make the house seem larger; the standee area is being eased with new mirrors and furnishings and a new screen will be up in time for the opening. Outside the new announcement sign is half-installed. Vive la France!

Yesterday afternoon's preview of "Strike Up the Band" brought our first view of Larry Nunn, who won his spurs on the radio in Irene Rich's series last year and who has been roundly cheered by star-chaser Ray Bell. Larry is a young, slight chap, still in Hollywood's Junior High, with an outstanding personality that his slight build might belie. In the Mickey Rooney-Judy Garland film opening at the Capitol Thursday morning, the lad has a most sympathetic role, that of a shy chap with a yen for Mickey's Judy. And he's good.

How he got the role is interesting. Director Busby Berkeley had his big musical cast lined up with the exception of this one role. Like many a movie magnate, Berkeley sat thinking his problem out with his radio on. Miss Rich's program was spinning its course. An appealing boyish voice played an important part in the story. And, of course, that was the voice Berkeley wanted. By sheer luck he fitted the part physically, was signed to an M-G-M contract two days later and has not quite gotten over the suddenness of it all even yet. He'd gone on the air because he couldn't get a job on the screen and, after two years at the mike, he'd very nearly forgotten his earlier ambition. Which is nice going at 13.

Glenn Miller and his boys continue to mop up at the Earle. Latest chore for them today and tomorrow, besides their 10 o'clock broadcasts, is an extra show these last two days of the Thirteenth street engagement, making six in all each day: 10:55 a. m., 1:20, 3:50, 6:15, 8:45 and 11 p. m. And with two Nation-wide broadcasts thrown in, that makes 14 separate performances in two days. Now who wants to lead a band?

AMATEUR LIFE: When President Roosevelt set October 16 as Registration Day under the Selective Service and Training Act, the cast of the Pierce Hall opener, "Three Men on a Horse," breathed collective sighs of relief. Of the eight men in the cast, four are reserve officers and three others are within the prescribed age limits. Of the four feminine figures, three would be affected romantically speaking. But the show goes on October 9 and 10.

The East Washington Troupers are holding tryouts tomorrow night at Eastern High School for their first play, "The Cuckoo's Nest," a three-act comedy. L. Zaff Rogers is directing and the tryouts will begin at 8 p. m.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Oct. 1.

"Spring Parade," with Deanna Durbin, is as simple as your A B C's, but the master touch of Henry Koster makes it live in your memory. It takes you right away from the hatreds of the world and puts springtime in your heart, gives you the youth, joy and melody that was old Vienna, where a waltz was as necessary as bread. Deanna is in excellent voice, looks lovely, and exudes all her natural charm. But it is Refugee S. K. Sakall, Bob Cummings, and Henry Stephenson who give outstanding performances. Mischa Auer doesn't have enough to do, but there is no place for more.

HOPPER

When you think of the hymns of hate on our screens, compare them with "Spring Parade"—which will do more in war-torn Europe for our motion picture industry than all our propaganda pictures put together. You'll know what I mean.

When Eddie Ludwig lost his keys and returned to the lobby after the preview to find them, he discovered a small, dismayed man waiting. Doorman was sorry, but they'd have to go—he was turning out the lights. Man said he'd just have to wait. "Well, who are you?" asked the doorman.

"Just Mr. Durbin," he replied. "My wife and Deanna got lost in the shuffle—and they won't know where to look for me unless I wait here." Now Deanna calls him "the little man who wasn't there."

Comes news that Carole Landis' and Willis Hunt's split wasn't so much due to incompatibility as it was her desire for more publicity. Seems she got more space in national magazines and papers before her marriage and doesn't want anything to interfere with it.

Jack Barrymore was telling of the movie czar, a former tailor, who was pointing his finger in his face while they were having an argument. "Don't point your finger at me," snapped Jack. "I remember when it had a thimble on it."

John Payne was cast in a picture called "Ready, Willing and Beautiful." When he got the script, title had been changed to "Tall, Dark and Handsome." When he read it, he said it should be "Short, Fat and Repulsive."

WALTER BRENNAN, DORIS DAVENPORT AND GARY COOPER, a trio from the Palace-bound "The Westerner." Walter Brennan, winner of an Academy Award for his "Kentucky" colonel, arrives in the Capital this morning for a two-day visit accompanied by his wife. He has had outstanding roles in "They Shall Have Music," "Stanley and Livingstone," "Tom Sawyer" and "Come and Get It"

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Oct. 1

ELEANOR ROOSEVELT: Louis Ritter, your furrier, visited the White House last week, to reline the President's fur-lined coat. "This is a rush job, isn't it?" asked Ritter, "because I suppose you'll want this for the inauguration" . . . "It's only September," the President laughed. "There's still plenty of time."

LYONS

AL JOLSON: Sunday night was the most memorable evening in the life of Eddie Davis, the ex-cab driver who wrote your new show. Six years ago Eddie wasn't allowed to park his cab in front of Leon & Eddie's. . . . Then he became a gag-writer for Eddie Cantor, accompanied him to Hollywood and wrote a number of movies, including "Radio City Revels." . . . Now he's back in New York, and Sunday night Broadway honored him, when he was the guest of honor at Leon & Eddie's celebrity party. Davis invited, as his guests, some cab drivers with whom he associated in the old days. For that was his night, signifying his success as a writer. That success is now complete, because—as happens to all successful writers—a summons, for plagiarism, concerning "Radio City Revels," was served upon him. The process server had waited for years and was able to find his quarry only after reading that Davis would be there to receive the homage of Broadway.

EARL BROWDER: Communists and Bundists who might be conscripted into the Army will not be supplied with ammunition, nor be given training in how to use military equipment. There will be "labor battalions" for these men, most of whom are known to the Federal officials . . . WENDELL WILLKIE: Ed Noble, who resigned as Undersecretary of Commerce and issued a statement in your support, again is flirting with the New Deal. One of America's best known columnists also may jump on the bandwagon . . . BOB GREGORY: Your mother-in-law, the Ranee of Sarawak, is going to Vancouver, and then to Shanghai, hoping to be able to get home to Sarawak from there.

ED FLYNN: It took a Presidential campaign to get Mitzi Somach, who resigned as the mayor's secretary, to work for him again. She's working for his Independent committee. . . . J. EDGAR HOOVER: Courtney Ryley Cooper, whose body was found hanging in a hotel closet Saturday night, told me—when I saw him in Hollywood last month—that he had been working in Mexico on a special assignment from you. His friends refuse to believe the suicide story.

LORD LOTHIAN: Mrs. Tony Biddle, wife of the American Ambassador to Poland, just contributed 40 fully equipped motorcycles to England. The shipment included helmets, sidecars, blankets, gloves, etc. . . . DOROTHY THOMPSON: Sinclair Lewis, who went West to collect material for a new book, is getting copy now in Reno . . . J. P. MORGAN: Some of the bank-president members of the American Bankers Association who went to Atlantic City for the annual convention, received counterfeit bills, as change, when they paid their bar accounts. In each case, the bartenders explained it was all a gag.

HENRY LUCE: When Warner Bros. discontinued "You're In the Army Now"—because the subject is no longer funny—the writer who had been assigned to that story compared notes with the Fox writer who also had been working on a story about the Plattsburg camp. They found that, scene for scene, their scripts were identical, because their source-material was the same—the article in Fortune, and the New Yorker cartoons about military training for civilians. . . . ADOLF BERLE, JR.: Col. Pedrosa, head of Cuba's army, will arrive here next week. . . . HARRY HOPKINS: Tommy Corcoran, despite the reports, will not run the Norris-LaGuardia headquarters in New York, for F.D.R. . . . Your former assistant, David K. Niles, who set up that committee, will run it. LaGuardia is so independent that he wouldn't use the speech written especially for him.

DR. ALLAN ROY DAFOE: Clark Kinnaird, the newspaper syndicate representative for the Dionne quintuplets, went to Toronto, after visiting Callandar, and tried to purchase a special knife he needed . . . He went into the hardware section of a department store, and was shown the knife he wanted. Kinnaird noticed, however, that it was stamped "Made in Germany." He refused to buy it, and demanded to see the section-manager for an explanation . . . "Oh, please don't mind that made in Germany stamp. It's quite all right," he was reassured. "That knife is just contraband. It's part of a cargo we captured on the high seas."

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Oct. 1.—National newpaper week, observed from today through October 8, puts me in a reminiscent mood. When I started writing a movie column over 20 years ago neither my subject nor what I wrote rated much attention. I was lucky if my "Scene on the Screen" was carried next to the obituaries, for the column was looked upon as an experiment. Today Hollywood sends out news from 200 accredited motion picture writers, and even the war hasn't succeeded in keeping motion picture news off the front page.

PARSONS

Not only have motion pictures become an important subject, but the producers are giving our newspaper craft a new dignity. Warner Brothers' "Dispatch from Reuters" tells of the struggles of an able newspaper reporter. It is the finest movie tribute ever paid our profession. "Foreign Correspondent" is another worthwhile newspaper story. Now Harold Lloyd (and this is my news for today) is planning to star in a comedy showing the humorius exploits of a young Washington reporter. Bob Allen and Drew Pearson of the Washington Merry-Go-Round fame will write the story.

Snapshops of Hollywood collected at random: Al Hall and Fay Wray are serious; Garbo is really coming out of her shell. She was at the Jack Warners again, and Constance Bennett, Elsa Maxwell, Lady Mendl, Pat Patterson and some 15 others came to meet her. Connie was busier than 10 people getting ready for her six weeks' stay in Reno. I stopped by her house and went to the Warners with her; Mischa Auer and Pat Oakley twoing at Bill Jordon's Bar of Music; was introducted to the new Ameche baby Sunday, and what a darling he is! Don and Honore left for New York, and they were as excited as two kids; the tea to have been held at Myrna Loy's house for the Chinese war relief has been transferred to Norma Shearer's home because of Arthur Hornblow's illness. Myrna is very worried, for yesterday Arthur had a relapse.

Ann Rutherford is receiving long-distance telephone calls from a San Francisco attorney. Apparently the flirtation she had with one of our stars a few weeks ago is ended; Rosalind Russell's sister, Mary Jane, will preview movies for Stage Magazine.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Metropolitan

"The Howards of Virginia" reopened yesterday morning at the Metropolitan Theater after a two-week's engagement at the Earle.

Adapted from the widely praised novel by Elizabeth Page, "The Tree of Liberty," the film details the story of a Virginia family against the backround of the Revolutionary War. With Cary Grant as an able, forthright frontiersman and Martha Scott as the courageous patrician who becomes his frontier wife, the film boasts a large cast.

While the picture has an enormous panorama of history for its background, it is for the most part admirably successful, the earlier half of the work being particularly admirable. The atmosphere is one of courage and vigor, the very scope of its attempt making it one of the finer films of the year. Outdoor sequences were filmed in nearby Williamsburg and the work was directed by "Cavalcade's" Frank Lloyd.

'Oh, Yeah!' That's what this baby leopard seems to be snarling as, defiant and surly, it faces a cameraman for the first time. Birthplace: Liberia, West Africa

'Zoocomers' Arrive; Libby Is Happiest

By Gerald G. Gross

Libby was a happy girl yesterday. A chimpanzee doesn't turn flip flops and make friends with strangers unless it's feeling pretty good.

Libby was happy because, for the first time in a month, the floor beneath her feet had a solid foundation and because she had plenty of room to stretch, leap and roll over. Libby, at last, was free—in a cage at the Zoo.

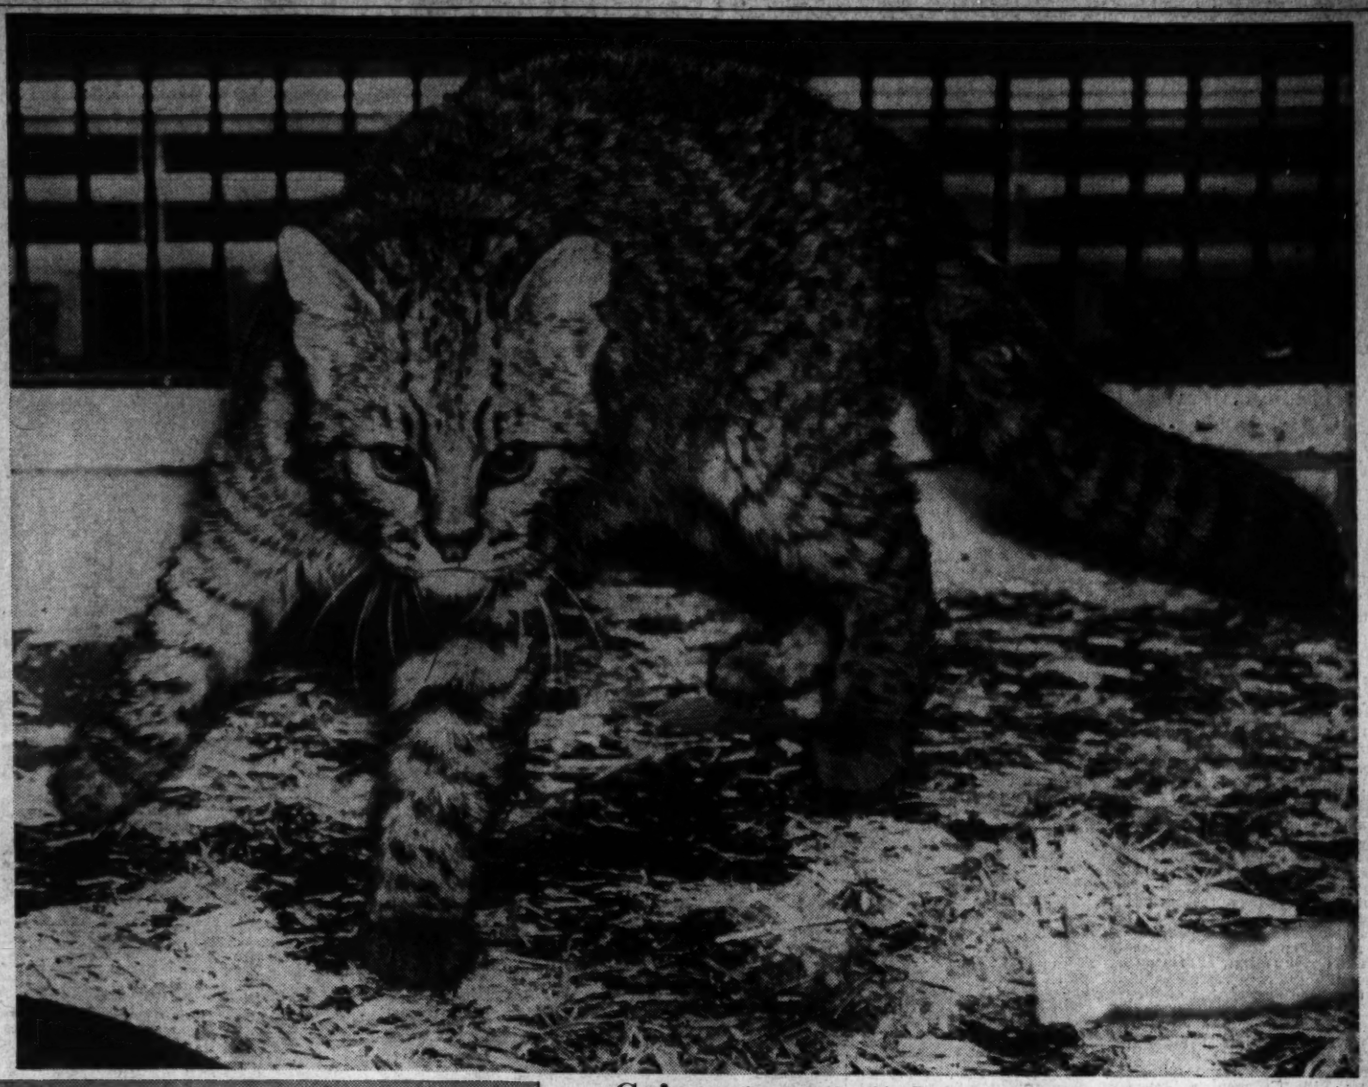
The playful chimp, along with a baby leopard and several poisonous snakes, arrived at National Zoological Park yesterday from West Africa, ending a month-long trip that began on the Firestone rubber plantations in Liberia.

The leopard, two rhinocerous vipers, two dozen burrowing toads, three worm snakes, a rare green mamba and Libby herself are gifts to Washington's Zoo from the Firestone people. In the shipment also were three chevrotains (tiny deers) and two bush pigs which must undergo a quarantine period in New York before being allowed to proceed to the Capital.

Arriving simultaneously at the Zoo was a shipment of animals from South America, including a hairy armadillo with a ravenous appetite, two Geoffroy wildcats, two dozen toads, three worm snakes, two Patagonian wild dogs, three nutrias and several bright-plumaged birds. These were obtained in swaps with dealers.

A curious fact about the newly added toads and worm snakes is that they refuse to meet the public. They like to burrow underground and stay there, a habit which is making it difficult for Zoo keepers who would like to put them on exhibition.

The African animals were escorted across the Atlantic by Louis Chancellor, a Firestone plantation overseer, who helped Zoo Director William M. Mann collect some of the beasts which he brought back from Liberia several weeks ago.



Grim is the word for this Geoffroy cat, another newcomer, from South America. The Zoo obtained him in a swap

Newsom to Face Derringer in Series Opener

ing game as an even-money proposition or, in the language of the bookmakers, "We'll lay 4 to 5 and give you your choice of teams."

World Series eve finds Cincinnati again in a dither. Entirely forgiven by the local citizens in the joy of a second straight pennant by the Reds is the World Series debacle of last year when the Yankees slapped down "Our Boys" in four straight games.

Crosley Field's capacity of 32,800 will be filled by seat-holders and standees. The few tickets which fell into the hands of scalpers are selling for as high as $50 for a pair of $5.50 seats which are not too choice. The city is splotched with "Reds" pennants and hundreds of incoming series fans are being shunted to nearby cities with all of Cincinnati's hostelries taking no more reservations.

If there are any misgivings among Cincinnati folks they stem chiefly from the disturbing reports of the Reds' casualty list as the opening game nears. Catcher Ernie Lombardi and Second Baseman Lonnie Frey are extremely doubtful starters for the Reds and all of Manager Bill McKechnie's brave grins today could not conceal his concern over the pair.

Big Lombardi gamely took the pre-series workout with the Reds today, his first time in uniform since spraining an ankle while chasing a pop foul two weeks ago, but he hobbled pathetically around the field. Tonight there was grave doubt that he would play in the first two games, thus devolving the catching burden on 42-year-old Jimmy Wilson, recently taken off the coaching list.

Frey Works Out

Second Baseman Lonnie Frey, victim of a freak accident in which the big toe of his right foot was broken by a falling lid from a water cooler, also took today's workout with the Reds, but he was still limping painfully. Frey, one of the three left-handed hitters in the Reds' line-up, will doubtless be replaced by the smart fielding, but light-hitting Eddie Joost.

The Tigers followed the Reds onto the field today for final practice and any Reds who were lingering about after hours witnessed a disturbing demonstration of Tiger power. Big Hank Greenberg hit five practice homers over the left-field wall and nine times the Tigers sent pitches out of the park. Rudy York, Barney McCosky, Charley Gehringer and Dick Bartell pounded the ball into the street beyond the fence that is only 328 feet distant from the plate.

If the Tigers were attempting to flaunt their power for whatever psychological effect it might have on the Reds, it was an old Yankee trick. That was the Yankee custom—scare the opposition with power displays in practice. The awe that the Yankees always created was a powerful factor in their World Series triumphs.

Tiger Power Shows

The Tigers' show of long-distance power was brought into bolder relief following as it did, the Reds' batting practice. The Reds dealing almost strictly in modest one-base shots to all fields, with only big Frank McCormick hitting the ball out of the park. The threatened absence of Lombardi virtually halves the long-distance capabilities of the Reds.

The Tigers were a gay gang as they noted the writing on the left field wall which showed the fence to be only 328 feet from the plate. Even such left-handed hitters as Barney McCosky and Charlie Gehringer were poking the ball against the fence. Crosley Field's right field wall is a considerable poke of 360 feet.

The edge in power definitely lies with the Tigers who are tied for first place in American League team hitting with an average of .286, 20 points more than the team batting of the Reds, but Cincinnati folks are cocksure that Derringer will stifle the Tiger attack.

Three times Derringer has gone to the mound in a World Series, once as a raw rookie with the Cardinals in 1931—and twice for the Reds last season. Tomorrow he will be bidding for his first series victory. The 2-0 game which he lost to Red Ruffing and the Yankees last year was described as the best pitched game of the 1939 series.

Cincinnati folks are counting on Derringer's superb coolness under fire, his excellent control and wide pitching repertoire to offset the lack of punch in the Reds' line-up. With Lombardi out, First Baseman Frank McCormick will be the Reds' only batter hitting over .300, at shortstop Bill Myers is hitting a bare .291. Eddie Joost, Frey's replacement, has been a mere .216 hitter. The only southpaw batters the Reds can bring to bear against Newsom's right-handed pitching are Ival Goodman, a .258 hitter this year, and Jimmy Ripple, the ex-Giant, with a .298 average.

Lyons Hurls, Chisox Beat Cubs by 5-3

39-Year-Old Star Allows 10 Hits, Makes 3 Himself, Driving in 3 Runs

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Oct. 1.—Ted Lyons, that sly old gentleman of the Chicago White Sox, made the Chicago Cubs "like it" again today—with reverse English.

The 39-year-old veteran pitched the route as the White Sox won the opening game of the 1940 City Championship series, 5 to 3, but it was Lyons' batting, rather than his hurling, that gave him top honors for the afternoon.

As compared to the brilliant five-hit performance he turned in as the White Sox won the city title just a year ago, Lyons today gave the National Leaguers 10 safeties. But he minimied those blows with a batting spree which saw him get three hits in four trips to the plate and bat in three runs.

Passeau Pounded

The White Sox, which have won the last five city championship skirmishes, went to work early on Claude Passeau, who won 20 games for the Cubs this past National League season. The South Siders scored three runs in the second on a walk and hits by Taft Wright, Mike Kreevich, Lyons and Jim Webb. Lyons' hit was a sharp single off Shortstop Bob Mattick's glove and scored Wright and Kreevich.

Passeau, seeing Lyons set an example at the plate, batted in the two runs which the Cubs scored in their half of the second. With two out, Al Todd reached first on an error and advanced to third on Mattick's double. Passeau then doubled them both home before Stan Hack grounded out.

Fans Side

Passeau struck out three men in the third inning, but two of the "whiffs" came after Julius Solters' homer over the left field wall. The final White Sox run came in the fourth inning as Kreevich doubled and reached home on a single by Lyons, who long has been called "Elmer the Great" by his mates because of the tales he tells of his imaginative batting prowess.

The fifth inning produced the final Cub run, produced on singles by Bill Nicholson, Jim Gleeson and Glenn Russell.

Passeau gave up the same number of hits as did Lyons, who was pitching in his twelfth city series. Passeau fanned eight batsmen, with Lyons striking out seven. Several

Nats Draft George Archie From Seattle

Right-Hand Hitting First Baseman, 27, May Play Regularly

By Shirley Povich
A Staff Correspondent

Cincinnati, Oct. 1.—Out of the minor league grab bag the Washington club tonight drew First Baseman George Archie, of Seattle, for the draft price of $7,500.

Archie, a strapping right-handed hitter, had a former major league tryout with the Detroit Tigers. Last season he was rated one of the ranking first basemen in the Pacific Coast League, boasting a batting average of approximately .320. He is 27 years old.

Archie was traded to Seattle by Detroit at the end of the 1938 season in part payment for Pitcher Freddie Hutchinson. Previously he had been in the American Association for two years.

"He's had a lot of seasoning in class AA ball," said Griffith of his new purchase, "and I think he'll be our regular first baseman."

Three First Basemen

Thus the Nats will go into spring training next season with three first basemen: Archie, Jimmy Vernon and Jack Sanford.

The chief surprise of tonight's draft meeting was a negative development—the failure of any big league club to claim "Boots" Poffenberger, eccentric pitching star of the Nashville team of the Southern Association.

All the big league clubs passed up Poffenberger despite his amazing total of 28 victories for Nashville during the season and the play-offs. Obviously the reason was his failure to keep in training in former big league trials with Detroit and Brooklyn. The New York Giants drafted Ace Adams, Poffenberger's pitching mate with Nashville.

Indians Claim Howell

The Cleveland Indians, seeking to bolster their weak hitting outfield, claimed the leading batter of the International League, Murray Howell, hefty swatting, but slow-footed outfielder of the Baltimore Orioles, who hit .360 in the 1940 season.

The complete draft list:

Washington — First Baseman George Archie, from Seattle.

Athletics—Third Baseman Pete Suder, from Kansas City.

Red Sox—Pitcher Oscar Judd, from Sacramento.

Cleveland — Outfielder Murray Howell, from Baltimore.

Phillies—Pitcher Frank Melton, from Columbus.

Giants—Pitcher Ace Adams, from Nashville.

Chicago Cubs—Catcher Robert Scheffing, from Rochester.

Pittsburgh—Outfielder Ed Stewart, from San Diego.

Cincinnati — Outfielder Mike Christoff, from Oakland.

Laurel to Open Today With $7,500 Feature

15 Sprinters Named With Roman Favored; 25-Day Session Opens With Good Card; 10,000 Crowd Expected; Posttime Is 1:30

By Walter Haight

After two off days during which regular fans caught up with their knitting and sitting, thoroughbred horse racing, Maryland style, moves into nearby Laurel today for a 25-day stand. Daily for the next month, Sunday excepted of course, the horses will go round and round and money will go in one window and out the other. The turf fans hope to be on the receiving end at that other window.

Given a break in the weather, some 10,000 customers are expected to welcome King Horse out on the Baltimore boulevard. Racing Secretary John P. Turner was able to muster the best program offered in the Free State this fall. Although the card opens with a maiden jaunt for 2-year-olds and tapers down to a pair of distance affairs with a slight half-mile flavor, in between there's a lot of white meat.

The high point of the card is the $7,500 added Capital Handicap, the first of ten big races during the month-long session. From a monetary standpoint, the two top events are the Selima Stakes, which generally nets the winning owner about $25,000 and the $15,000 added Washington Handicap.

Plenty of Speed

This year's Capital Handicap, as usual at six furlongs, has drawn a strong field and should fairly sizzle with speed. The largest field of the Maryland fall season, 15 horses in 13 interests, have been named over night. Weights have been distributed from 96 to 120 pounds with the top assignment going to George D. Widener's Dr. Whinny.

The field includes performers from Havre de Grace, Belmont Park, Narragansett Park and Hawthorne. In many cases the handicappers are

Series Notes: Writers Favor Cincinnati Reds

Cincinnati, Ohio, Oct. 1.—Series Sidelights—Connie Mack, the lone prophet of the Yankees' defeat in the 1940 pennant race, visited World Series press headquarters today and had this to say of the Yanks:

"The team that beats 'em in 1941 will breeze in to the pennant."

Thirty-eight baseball writers picked the Reds to win the series against 28 favoring the Tigers in a poll taken this morning. Notable is the fact that the baseball correspondent of the Daily Worker did not pick the Reds to win . . . For which he will doubtless be read out of the party on orders from the Kremlin . . . Larry

Zivic Seeks Family's 1st Title Friday

Last of Fighting Brothers Is Underdog In Armstrong Bout

By the United Press

New York, Oct. 1.—Fritzie Zivic, owner of a Pittsburgh fight club, will violate the code of the Promoters' Union Friday night by climbing into Madison Square Garden's ring and offering his kisser as target for Henry Armstrong, welterweight champion.

Zivic, of the bashed, pug nose and light brown hair, is not content with being president and matchmaker of the Pittsburgh Sports Arena, Inc. He insists upon adding the appellation "welterweight champeen" to his less glamorous sobriquets. He is mighty confident of turning the trick, although the betting odds are 2½ to 1 against him.

Do not get the idea, however, that this 26-year-old Croatian disdains ownership of the club. No, indeed; he is plenty proud of his possession. Which is natural for a lad who was reared with boxing gloves on—the youngest of five fighting brothers, largest professional family in pugilistic history. With his fists he pounded out the dollars that bought the arena—and other properties. He has been tossing leather since 6 years old. This will be his 150th professional fight. He is one of the best all-round scrappers in any division—a formidable threat to Hammering Henry's crown, despite the wagering price.

Fritzie is formidable because he's fast, strong, smart, tough, and a hard puncher. He knocked out 65 of his 149 opponents and broke Lou Ambers' jaw in 1935. Although taller than Armstrong, Fritzie too has slender legs and the muscular torso of a middleweight. Moreover, he delights in rough tactics.

Baker Picks Tigers In Long Series

Detroit Manager Sees Team's Power Too Much for Reds

By Del Baker
Manager Detroit Tigers (INS).

Cincinnati, Oct. 1.—It's hard to pick a World Series winner. So many things can happen in a short series; so much depends upon the breaks. But, of course, I'm picking the Tigers. Aside from the fact that I'm manager of the team, I'd be a chump not to pick them.

BAKER

I think the series will be long this time. Maybe six games; maybe the full distance. I'm picking our club because I know it won't fold up, because I expect to get some good pitching, and because I know we can out-hit anything in baseball.

The record books will show you how often we've gone into the late innings of ball games, trailing three, four or five runs, with an inning or two to go, and won. One of the oldest sayings in baseball is, "a game isn't over until the last man is out," and that is particularly true of the Tigers. I've never seen a club that had more heart, or a club that kept swinging until the end anymore than my team.

Some of the experts call us the worst defensive team to win the American League pennant in a long time. My answer to that is that the best defense is a good offense, and we've got just that. We have great respect for the Cincinnati pitching. Everybody looks upon Derringer and Walters as fine pitchers. But we averaged about five runs a game every time we faced Feller this year, and ball clubs just don't see any better pitching than the kind Feller throws at them.

Believes Short Reds' Park Will Be Big Aid To Greenberg, York

At the time this is written I haven't made up my mind about my opening pitcher. It may be either Schoolboy Rowe or Buck Newsom. Or neither. I'll know a lot better a few hours before we take the field. I don't think I can go wrong on whichever man I choose.

The Tigers are in good shape. They weathered a terrific stretch drive surprisingly well. You hear a lot about exhaustion setting in on teams that win their pennant in a hard drive. But that isn't necessarily true. We didn't start to come on until almost the middle of September, and though the race was close and exciting, and demanded everything we had, we've still got a lot left.

As I see it, this will be a

WASHINGTON, OCT. 2, 1940

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Cincinnati, Ohio, Oct. 1.—In the event the Reds win the 1940 World Series, the National League would qualify as a base ingrate if it did less than enshrine 'em.

POVICH

For Four years now the National League has been raising its voice amid the ruins of its World Series hopes to shout that the New York Yankees—not the American League—did it. They were beaten by a super team, not a representative American League club, was the National League contention. Team for team the National League was as good if not better, was the cry. The Yanks were simply a standout club.

Well, we'll be seeing about that shortly. It is no Yankee team in the series this year for the first time since 1935. The American League banner is being carried by the Detroit Tigers, a club that won its pennant with a smaller total of victories than any pennant winner in more than a decade. The Tigers assuredly are not a super club. The National League is now face to face with the issue it has been courting.

The Reds could do much to restore National League prestige by beating the Tigers. A Cincinnati victory would give a ring of truth to National League claims of the past few years. A National League winner that breezed home in its own pennant race will be arraigned against a Detroit club that barely eked out a one-game pennant triumph. A defeat this year would be as salt on the wounds of the N. L. It's up to the Reds who are carrying the whole weight of National League contentions and if they emerge as winners, the league will be beholden to 'em like no other N. L. pennant winner in history.

It is a shoddy break for the Reds that in the year when they might relieve their league of the A. L. yoke they are crippled by injuries on World Series eve. Ernie Lombardi is more vital to the batting attack of the Reds than any other player on the team, but his ankle is swollen to the size of a melon and he may not get off the bench.

But the Reds' catching duties will not suffer despite the absence of Lombardi. In fact, the Cincinnati catching situation has produced what could be the most romantic note of the series, because of the bench will come Jimmy Wilson to handle the Cincinnati pitchers. Wilson is 42 years old. He retired as a catcher nearly three years ago. As a coach with the Reds, he was hog-fat, scarcely dreaming he would ever catch again, much less in an important World Series.

A long chain of circumstances has catapulted Wilson into the series, however. First, Willard Hershberger, the Reds' No. 2 catcher, committed suicide, removing Regular Catcher Lombardi's only understudy. Then, two weeks ago, Lombardi turned his ankle on the concrete at Brooklyn while chasing a foul pop, and limped into a hospital. Dick West, a catcher who had been with Baltimore, did not join the Reds early enough to be eligible for the World Series. The only other backstop with the team was young Bill Baker who could not be entrusted with a World Series job.

In his dire predicament, Manager Bill McKechnie looked longingly in Wilson's direction. Ten years ago Wilson had been the prize catcher of the National League; once had managed the Cardinals and later the Phillies. Of his catching intellect there was no question, but he was old, and slow and fat. McKechnie's glances at Wilson were merely wishful. He didn't even put the question to Wilson.

He didn't have to. Wilson bounced out of the Reds' dugout, grabbed his shin-pads and protector and told McKechnie he would catch. The Reds' manager was willing to sacrifice speed and hitting for brains at that time and Wilson got the job. Wilson's first chance was a long foul pop that he chased to the Brooklyn dugout, catching it after a run that to him seemed miles. He was fagged and admitted it. "This kind of stuff will get me in shape quick, Bill," he grinned between pants.

Wilson's been catching for the Reds since Lombardi's injury. He has taken off 20 pounds. He has been hitting a respectable .243. His throwing to bases is all right. And the suspicion is that with Wilson behind the bat, the Reds' pitchers will actually be in better hands. They sort of love him.

"The day after Lombardi was hurt, Wilson was catching me in Brooklyn," relates Bucky Walters, fast-balling right-hander of the Reds. "I know my fast ball was ruining his hand. I saw it red and raw and puffed like a hamburger on the bench between innings. I went back there and started to ease up with curve balls. Wilson walked out to me and asked 'What's the idea, shaking off my sign for the fast one?' I told him I knew it was hurting his hand. 'Never mind my hand, you do the pitching, I'll do the catching,' Jimmy said. You gotta love a guy like that, huh?"

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Cincinnati, Oct. 1.—All's right with the World (Series):

The secret of Willard Hershberger's suicide is supposed to be known only by three men—Bill McKechnie, Warren Giles and the relative who came here today to pick up the late catcher's trunk and other effects. The Reds voted Hershberger's mother a full share of the series melon, which should come to around $6,000 . . . Steve O'Neill, who was run out of the Cleveland manager's job by much the same pressure that was put on Oscar Vitt, got the perfect revenge last Friday when Floyd Giebbel outpitched Bobby Feller and clinched the pennant for the Tigers. O'Neill developed Giebbel at Buffalo . . . The National League hasn't won a World Series game since Carl Hubbell beat the Yanks in the fourth game of the 1937 series—nine straight losses.

CONSIDINE

I'll make a great story, we think, if old Jimmy Wilson is behind the plate when and if Bucky Walters beats the Tigers. Five years ago Wilson was manager of the Phillies, and doing badly. Walters was his second-string third baseman. Wilson turned Bucky into a pitcher who became a great figure in the game. Later Wilson lost his job and became a coach on the Reds. His playing days were over, but late last month, when Ernie Lombardi first hurt himself, Wilson went back on the active list and did a lot to steer the Reds home in front . . . reunion in Cincinnati.

McKechnie is going to let Giebbel sit on the Tiger bench during the series. Giebbel, not eligible for the series because he reported to the Tigers after September 1, is equally ineligible to sit on the bench. Last year Joe McCarthy wouldn't let several ineligible Reds sit on the Cincinnati bench . . . Lonnie Frey isn't the only Red who was attacked by a water bucket. The iron lid of the water cooler fell on his right foot the other day and may cost the Reds their series chance. Several years ago Bill Werber kicked a water bucket in the Boston dugout, during a fit of temper. He had kicked a lot of them before that, and dented them, but this day the groundkeeper had put an iron one in the dugout. The blow jammed Werber's toes halfway back into his foot, and slowed him up for life.

One thing you won't see at the World Series is ball players for other clubs. Those nickel-nursing big leaguers carry starting blocks with them, in order to get a faster break away from the scene of the biggest show in their trade. There are a few exceptions—notably Moe Berg, Harry Danning, Zeke Bonura.

Crosley Field, where the left field wall is 328 feet from home plate, where the center field wall is only 387 and the right field 366, is a hitter's paradise for right-handers. We understand the Tigers have a couple of such sluggers . . . The Yanks hit six of their eight home runs here last series, four of them in the third game.

This will be Bill Klem's eighteenth series, and his first since he battled with Goose Goslin in the lobby of the Book-Cadillac during the 1934 series between the Tigers and Cards . . . Schoolboy Rowe gave off a wheeze of relief today when he suddenly realized that he wouldn't have to take the "how am I doin' Edna" abuse that the Cards gave him in '34 . . . Cleveland fans, who squawk in their sleep, finally have a legitimate beef. Alva Bradley wouldn't refund any of the big advance sale for the Saturday and Sunday games with the Tigers last week. The fans had bought thousands of tickets, on the assumption that the pennant race would not end with Friday's game.

McKechnie wouldn't permit a group picture of his Reds to be taken, until Lombardi was well enough to pose . . . Specs were asking $70 for a strip of two tickets today—face value $33, but there wasn't much action.

The Tigers are the clumsiest American League winner since 1933, but can hit hard enough to overcome a lot of bungling. . . . Hank Gowdy, first big league player to enlist in the World War, is coaching the Reds. . . . Celebrities are arriving by the carload, but it is doubtful if Representative Ham Fish will be rooting for the Reds . . . Here are some of the home towns that will hold torchlight parades if the Reds win: Aliquippa, Pa. (Joe Beggs); Magazine, Ark. (Witt Guise); Tuscarawas, Ohio (Lloyd Moore); New York Mills, N. Y. (Mil Shoffner); Antioch, Tenn. (Jim Turner); Paw Creek, N. C. (Bill Baker); Mebane, N. C. (Lew Riggs), and Angels Camp, Calif. (Mike McCormick).

Walper-Haverstick Pull Double Upset in Grosner Pro-Am

'39 Titlists, Worsham, Bogart Lose

Cox and Barnes Also Bow to Dark Horses; Spencer and Rippy Enter Semifinals

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Leo Walper and Harry Haverstick included the defending champions among their victoms as they palyed a double giant-killing role in the first two rounds of the Grosner Match Play Pro-amateur championship yesterday at Manor Country Club. The driving range pro and the Lancaster, Pa., simon-pure, finalist in the National Intercollegiates this year, won twice by 2 and 1 margins, over Wiffy Cox and Erford Barnes and then Lewis Worsham and Ralph Bogart.

Meanwhile one of the most feared teams in the second annual event, Cliff Spencer and Claude Rippy, entered the semifinals with a 2 and 1 triumph over Ed Oliver, the St. Paul Open Champ, and Jock Olmsted, of Indian Spring. Spencer climaxed the match with an eagle deuce on the 394-yard sixteenth hole, dropping a full eight-iron shot in the cup for a dormie two-hole lead.

Kirkwood, Greiner Advance

Baltimore's co-medalists, Joe Kirkwood, jr., and Otto Greiner, of Terra Mariae, advanced without being extended as they included an 8 and 6 beating to Al Houghton and Jim Gipe, of Beaver Dam, in their double victory. Houghton termed it the worst defeat of his career.

Rut Coffey, the Winchester, Va., pro who gained a semifinal berth last year, moved in this time with a different partner, Bobby Bowers, local public links amateur. They pulled the biggest upset of the morning round, a 1-up victory over Andy Gibson and Spencer Overton, the crack duo from Baltimore. Coffey and Bowers, once held a 4 up and 6 to play lead, lost it, and then Coffey capped a brilliant round of 68 with a winning birdie on the eighteenth hole.

Walper and Haverstick, eight under par as a team for the day, run against their third tough match in a row this morning, meeting Spencer and Rippy. Kirkwood and Greiner, teaming together for the first time, will be up against Coffey and Bowers.

While most of the good matches were confined to the upper bracket, Otto Greiner played the day's best golf. In the afternoon match the former Maryland and Middle Atlantic champion started three under par for five holes, was out in 31 and four under par when the match ended on the twelfth. He and Kirkwood were six under as a team as they buried Houghton and Gipe before the rain started.

Walker Drops 15-Footer

A consistent and at times sensational putting streak on the part of Walper and Haverstick led to the downfall of Worsham and Bogart, the co-medalists and 1939 titlists. Walper dropped a curling, downhill 15-foot birdie putt on the third hole and a 55-footer, the length of the green, on the eighth both for deuces. Worsham and Bogart were both mixed in the woods on the ninth and they turned three down. The difference remained at three holes until Bogart won the sixteenth with a par to keep the match alive. Haverstick parred the seventeenth and it was all over.

Oliver was hitting the ball so far on the first nine of the afternoon match he was handicapped. Three times his tremendous tee shots curled around trees into virtual unplayable lies. Spencer's conceded birdie on the fourth and Rippy's near ace on the eighth gave the eventual winners a two-hole lead at the turn.

The match was even on 11 as Olmstead and Oliver started back with a one-two punch, the former dropping a 20-footer on the tenth hole for a birdie and Oliver a 35-foot deuce putt on 11. Rippy chipped in from off the green on twelve to go one up, and Oliver squared it again with another birdie on the thirteenth. Spencer threw a beautiful chip shot against the stick for a birdie and 1-up lead on 15 and sent his team 2 up with his eagle on the sixteenth, the longest shot he has ever holed. Rippy halved the seventeenth for the match.

Coffey Played Well

Coffey probably played the finest and most consistent golf of the day among the pros, and with Bowers' help they had easy sailing with the exception of their four-hole lapse against Gibson and Overton in the morning.

Oliver and Olmsted posted a best-ball 65 in the first round and only won, 2 up, over Charlie Betschler and Jesse Dowling while Walper and Haverstick were also five under against Cox and Barnes.

First Round

Lewis Worsham (Burning Tree) and Ralph Bogart (Congressional), defeated Mel Ahorey and Roger Peacock (Indian Spring), 2 and 1; Leo Walper (unattached) and Harry Haverstick (Lancaster, Pa.) defeated Wiffy Cox (Congressional) and Erford Barnes (Rolling Road), 3 and 1; Cliff Spencer (East Potomac) and Claude Rippy (Washington) defeated Bob Barnett and Maj. J. B. Patterson (Chevy Chase), 3 and 2; Ed Oliver, Hornel, N. Y., and Jock Olmsted (Indian Spring), defeated Charles Betschler and Jesse Dowling, jr. (Hillendale), 2 and 1; Joe Kirkwood, jr., and Otto Greiner (Terra Mariae) defeated Tommy Doerer, jr., and Abe Abrams (Rock Creek), 3 and 2; Al Houghton and Jim Gipe (Beaver Dam) defeated Gene Larkin (Woodmont) and Joe Balestri (Beaver Dam), 5 and 3; Rut Coffey, Winchester, Va., and Bobby Bowers (unattached) defeated Andy Gibson (Bonnie View) and Spencer Overton (Dolling Road), 1 up; Jack Harris (unattached) and Jerry Hart (Indian Spring) defeated Al Jamison (unattached) and E. W. Sharpe (Kenwood), 1 up.

Second Round

Walper and Haverstick defeated Worsham and Bogart, 2 and 1; Spencer and Rippy defeated Oliver and Olmsted, 2 and 1; Kirkwood and Greiner defeated Houghton and Gipe, 8 and 6; Coffey and Bowers defeated Harris and Hart, 4 and 3.

Fairings

9:30, Walper and Haverstick vs. Spencer and Rippy. 9:35, Kirkwood and Greiner vs. Coffey and Bowers. 18-hole finals at 1:30 p. m.

Toss of the Coin Settles Columbia Championship Question

A. U. Backfield Dependable Quits School

American University yesterday was dealt a serious blow to its hopes for a successful opener aaginst Susquehanna Saturday when Melvin Werkmans, a leading candidate for the quarterback position, left school for a full-time outside job.

Meantime the Eagles, under Coach Staff Cassell, ignored the rain to hold a three-hour workout during which the varsity tested its defense against Susquehanna plays. In order to give all the first stringers an exacting practice Cassell worked the regular backfield against the regular line.

Special stress was placed upon punt returns and passes into the flat, Cassell, who scouted Susquehanna in its opening 20-6 victory over Buffalo, noted that the Pennsylvania eleven was weak in its defense against passes into the flat.

Stars of the drill were Safetymen Homer Sprinkle and Tommy Simpson, a pair of former Washington-Lee High School stars, and Tommy Cornell, an elusive halfback, who slipped away for several sizable gains. Capt. Jablonsky, a tackle, looked good on defense.

Fighter to Explain Cemetery Prowling To Court Today

By International News Service

Chicago, Oct. 1.—Authorities tonight investigated the strange explanation of Al Murphy, bantamweight fighter, for his presence in Graceland Cemetery, where police found him prowling.

"I was looking for the grave of Bob Fitzsimmons, the heavyweight. I wanted to dig him up," the fighter said.

Murphy will be asked for an elaboration of his story in court tomorrow.

Columbus Ohio, Oct. 1.—(AP).—American Baseball Association headquarters announced today umpire selections for the "Little World Series" between Louisville of the association and Newark of the International League.

The association arbiters will be Hal J. Weafer and Ernest D. Stewart. George L. Parker and Roy Van Grafian will represent the International circuit.

The series opens Wednesday night at Louisville, where the first three games will be played. The additional games, until one club has taken four of them, will be played at Newark.

D. C. Owner's Dog Takes All-Age Stake

Special Dispatch to The Post

Round Hill, Va., Oct. 1.—Frank of Woodridge, a white and liver pointer dog belonging to F. P. Vermillion, of Washington, D. C., and handled by Porter Carter, won the All-Age Stake at the closing today of the Loudoun Gun Dog Field Trials on the J. D. Thomas Farm, near Round Hill. This dog placed second in the All-Age Stake here last year.

Second place went to Zero, a white, black and ticked setter dog belonging to Virgil P. Hawse, of Staunton, and handled by the owner. Third place was captured by Virginia R. Boy, owned and handled by B. F. Drigger, of New Brunswick, N. J.

Frank of Woodridge did such good work in the first series that it was not necessary to call him back for another trial. He ran a big searching heat, made three nice finds in the bird field and was steady to wing and shot. Neither was it necessary to call back the second and third place dogs. Zero made two finds, which he handled beautifully, and while the third place dog found six birds, his race was not so consistent.

The members' shooting stake, which closed the trials, was won by Skipper of Caradoc, a white setter dog belonging to W. J. Harper, of Washington and Leesburg. He made three finds in the bird field and his ground work was superior. Second place was captured by Rex's Sonnyboy, white and black pointer, belonging to Aubrey Hall, of Purcellville, who also made three finds.

Polo Field Overhauled For Benefit

Smith, Iglehart Head Teams in Sunday Game; Ponies on Way

By Anne Hagner

The polo field in Potomac Park, which will be the scene of the town's first invasion by "big-time" polo Sunday afternoon, is already undergoing an overhauling in anticipation of the Bundles for Britain benefit, featuring eight of the country's best mallet experts.

Two hand-picked teams, designated as Meadowbrook and Texas, will import 60 ponies and grooms to the Fort Myer barns for the game, which will commence at 3 p. m.

The Texas aggregation will be headed by Cecil Smith, one of the two 10-goal players now in active competition in this country. The 180-pound former cowpuncher, once Will Rogers' favorite poloist, will bring three of his brilliant Argentine ponies from New York for Sunday's doings. The trio is topped by Cacique, Argentine champion in 1935 and used last year in the international match against England by Winston Guest, teammate of Smith's.

Guest will have three South American mounts, including Confite, Cometa and Charanda, and his American-bred Pipes o' Pan. The remaining Texans, J. Peter Grace and Michael Phipps, will have Wild Lad and Brown Fern, respectively, in addition to a long string of other well-bred ponies. Both Phipps and Guest are rated at nine goals.

Playing for Meadowbrook will be Stewart Iglehart, the Nation's only other ten-goal man, who has played on such championship teams as Templeton and Old Westbury. The handsome Yale graduate will ride his fleet-footed Rubisela, who placed second to the Gerry brothers' Toy Moon for the Friarstown Cup, awarded each year to the best-playing mare of the season.

Two Gerrys to Play

The two Gerrys, Robert and Elbridge, are likewise members of Meadowbrook's formidable outfit and will bring south with them Toy Moon, Blue Bottle, another Friarstown Cup winner, and Hawaiian Maid, a flashy gray Hawaiian-bred mare. The brothers are members of Long Island's famed Aknusti team, which last month defeated the Gulf Stream quartet for the National Open championship. "Ebby" Gerry has an eight-goal rating and Bob ranks just behind him with 7.

Meadowbrook's fourth star is Robert L. Strawbridge, hard-hitting president of the National Polo Association and a top-notch indoor player. His present rating is five goals. The Strawbridge-owned string has on it a pony named, believe it or not, Smith, in honor of Cecil Smith, who did his early training, and will be on the opposing line-up Sunday. Other ponies are the American-bred One Way Corrigan, Trigger and Galavan.

The caravan of mounts, grooms, and equipment will arrive in the

Webb's 76 Stands Up For Columbia Medal

Skinker, Favorite, Stopped by Rain; Is Third; Auton Places Second; Webb Meets George Ferris Today

The second day's field in the Columbia Club Championship yesterday couldn't touch Tommy Webb's 76 and the latter score stood up for medal honors in the 18-hole qualifications.

Earl Skinker, the tournament favorite, was hampered by the rain and finished with a 79, three strokes too many but the third best score of the tournament. Capt. Jesse Auton posted a 78 while Defending Champion Edgar Merkle was with Skinker at 79.

E. E. Krewson and Barge L. Hartz tied with 86s for the last place in the championship flight and rather than playoff they decided to flip a coin. Krewson won the toss and meets Maury Nee, who posted an 82, in the first round of match play today.

All the favorites successfully made the match play grade in the championship flight, including George Miller, 82; Martin McCarthy, the same score, and Luther C. Steward, jr., 85.

Wrestlers Ask Turner for Two Referees

Plummer, Newman Want Extra Official for Bout With Zaharias Boys

Claiming that one referee isn't enough, "Gentleman Lou" Plummer and Eddie Newman have petitioned Promoter Joe Turner to employ two referees for Thursday night's two-man team feature wrestling match against Chris and Babe Zaharias at Turner's Arena.

Turner said he was taking the request under advisement and would make a decision today.

Plummer and Newman further contend that favoritism always has been shown to opposing factions, and pointed to the bout with the Dusek brothers, Ernie and Emil.

Should Turner decide to use two arbiters, he will have Curly Brown, the new referee from New York, who made a big hit in disqualifying Plummer against Warren Bockwinkle last week, and Casey Borger, the popular Iowan.

The supporting card for Thursday was completed yesterday and shows Danno O'Mahoney, former world titleholder, against Bockwinkle in the semifinals; Paul Bosch against Henry Kulkowich, and Tiger Tasker, a newcomer from the Pacific Coast, against Harbie Freeman.

HENRY McLEMORE Says:

(By special wire to The Post)

CINCINNATI, OHIO—Oct. 1, 1940. Cincinnati's Reds will win the 1940 world series by taking four of six games from the Detroit Tigers.

I furnish this information with all the confidence of a snowshoe salesman in Florida. The players just won't behave in the series as they did over the regular season. Players who couldn't hit their glove size suddenly come to life. Pitchers who were invincible sometimes lose their stuff overnite. Great fielders suddenly start making errors, and ordinary fielders develop the skill of a Wagner.

In short, no sportswriter has ever devised a scheme whereby he could outfigure the human element.

But, I still give you Cincinnati. I like the strength of the Reds' great pitchers better than I do the Tigers' batting power.

Cincinnati has another advantage, too. The Reds are rested. They won their pennant weeks ago and have been able to relax and husband their strength. The Tigers, on the other hand, had to fight right down to the last second. They are bound to be a bit exhausted.

Redskins Add Hoffman to Punting Staff; Shake-up Seen

Rookie Back To Operate In 2d Quartet

May Be Understudy For Injured Todd Or Replace Veteran Blocking Backs

By Al Hailey
Post Staff Writer

In a move that may presage a major shake-up in the Redskin backfield, Coach Ray Flaherty yesterday conscripted Bob Hoffman, rookie blocking back, for his punting staff with a view toward using him in the second backfield headed by Frank Filchock.

This development gave rise to conjecture that Dick Todd, the flashy Texas running star injured in the Giant game, may be more seriously hurt than Flaherty cares to admit.

Whether Hoffman will alternate with Todd in the Filchock backfield or replace one of the veteran blockers is uncertain, but the Redskin coach yesterday said he believed that Todd will be able to play Sunday when the Skins meet the Steelers in Pittsburgh.

Hoffman's regular position in the rookie backfield, which heretofore has run as a unit, has been the inside back spot shared by Max Krause and Erny Pinckert.

The West Coast rookie hasn't done any kicking since he was a star at Monte Bello High School in Los Angeles, but Flaherty believes he has the ability to become a great kicker.

"When he hits that ball right it really travels, and I think that as soon as he gets used to kicking again he'll be pretty valuable as a punter," Flaherty said.

Hoffman Impressive

Just 22, Hoffman is a 6-foot-1 200-pounder and in his brief appearances in the Redskins' games with Brooklyn and New York was impressive on offense and did some timely work on the defense against enemy passes.

Flaherty had Hoffman working on his punting most of the morning yesterday and said he was well pleased with the Californian's progress. There are but three veteran kickers on the Redskins' squad—Sammy Baugh, in the starting backfield; Todd, and Jim Meade, reserve fullback. Roy Zimmerman, rookie from San Jose State, is the only other punter.

If Hoffman is used in the Filchock backfield, Wilbur Moore probably will step back into the No. 3, or fullback, spot held by Todd, leaving the No. 1 and 2 blocking spots to Hoffman and Pinckert.

Progress of the other three rookie backs — Roy Zimmerman, triple-threater; Bob Seymour, fine-plunging fullback, and Ray Hare, blocking back—has been especially good, Flaherty said, adding these three will probably see a lot of action against Pittsburgh.

Defense Is the Thing

The Redskins worked yesterday on defense against the Pittsburgh plays and then put in two hours polishing up the offense. This morning's drill at Griffith Stadium will be devoted strictly to offense, however, as the Steelers are reported to be a strong defensive club this year.

Although the new role assigned Hoffman may disrupt the rookie backfield, Flaherty will not abandon it altogether. He has openly stated the rookie quartet, as a unit, have more offensive power than any of his veteran combinations. Their weakness on defense against the wide-open brand of ball used by the pros, however, has made him hesitate about sending in the rookie set for any length of time.

While he insisted that Todd, who suffered a stomach injury when tackled by New York's Nello Falaschi in the Giant game, will play Sunday, Flaherty was less optimistic about Capt. Turk Edwards.

"Edwards may play, but I'm not going to use him unless I have to," Flaherty said. Turk received a pulled muscle in his leg in a freak sideline accident before the opening kickoff against the Giants.

Gadget to Revolutionize Football Officiating Invented by Auditor

M. B. Lamar, Manassas, Va., poses with his tri-scope—a gadget designed to relieve officials from the strain of making quick judgments on yardages where said judgments might bring down a deluge of eggs and ripe fruit. He'll demonstrate same this morning at the Redskins' workout in Griffith Stadium.

M. B. Lamar Introduces Tri-Scope as Means Of Getting Perfect Yardage Determinations

By Al Hailey

It must be open season on inventions, for comes now a contraption its inventor claims will revolutionize officiating at football games—a machine which will redue no end the number of uncomplimentary epithets hurled at officials by outraged fans.

The thing's called a triscope—which means it looks three ways at once—and it's designed to put perfection in the determination of yardages gained, lost or otherwise. And whats' more, it can be used to call the shot on a field goal.

This handy little gadget, which appears to be a cross between a telescope and a pistol, is the brainchild of M. B. (Bo) Lamar, former George Washington football star and now a resident of Manassas, Va.

Flaherty Likes Idea

Lamar will give his tri-scope a tryout this morning for the Redskins at their 10 o'clock workout in Griffith Stadium.

Coach Ray Flaherty, of the Redskins, enthusing briefly yesterday over Lamar's invention, said that its best points lay in the fact that it will save from 5 to 10 minutes in every game and will do away with all the wrangling over first downs—mainly the various forays by officials on and off the field with the chains for measurement.

It seems that Lamar's pet is geometrically perfect, and there'll be no arguing with such a speechless item as a triscope. Here's how the thing works:

At each end of the instrument are fine, magnifying lenses, and in the middle of the barrel are openings with reflectors that sight to the right and left.

Does Work of 2 Men

When Lamar goes into action he places stakes at each end of the sideline from which he is working, lines up his side sights on these stakes and "aims" the forward sight at the ball on the field. In this way he has a perfect right angle, giving him a perfect sight down the line of scrimmage (which, incidentally, enables him to spot offside plays often missed by the human eye).

That's the general idea of the triscope, but, as Lamar explains it, it does about everything a head linesman and a field judge both can do and makes no mistake about it.

Lamar, a 38-year-old auditor for the General Accounting Office, has been working on the instrument for several years and has a patent pending.

A graduate of Western High School and a brother of the former District boxing star, Henry Lamar, he conceived the idea—or the need for more perfect officiating—while playing football for George Washington in 1924-25.

His quest for lenses for the instrument was hindered, strangely enough, by Europe's war.

War Interfered

"What with the demand for lenses for bombing sights, gun sights and one thing or another, I had a hard time locating prisms," Lamar said. Now that it's all together, however, here's what Lamar says it'll do:

1. Set the line stakes correctly on first down.
2. Mark point of each down accurately.
3. Accurately and swiftly relocate the ball in its original position after incomplete forward passes and nullified plays.
4. Determine whether or not a first down has been made in 5 seconds or less, without leaving the sideline and more accurately than can be done under present methods.
5. Aid in calling off-side play accurately.
6. Operates with equal speed and accuracy under all weather conditions—snow, rain or mud notwithstanding (chalk lines on field not needed for instrument's observations).
7. Determines accurately the point where forward motion of the ball stopped, thereby aiding in determining when touchdowns as well as first downs have been made.
8. It saves time (approximately 10 minutes per game).
9. It saves labor (it is possible to operate accurately with only two men, instead of the usual four officials, and eliminates running out on the field and back with linestakes and chain).

Murray Eleven to Play Virginia A. C. Sunday

The Murray A. C. will engage the Virginia eleven Sunday in the Municipal Stadium at Alexandria in their annual clash at 2:30 p. m.

In the first meeting in 1938, the Virginians won, 9-6, and last season the Virginians won again, 31-19.

The Murrays opened this season with a 25-0 victory over the Brunswick Railroaders last Sunday.

Irish Drill For Pacific Game Saturday

Varsity Tests Defense Against Enemy Plays; Other Gridiron News

By the Associated Press

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 1.—Amid the confusion and excitement of the celebration of National "Knute Rockne Week," Notre Dame's football team calmly went about the business today of learning how to stop College of the Pacific plays.

Coach Elmer Layden sent the varsity through a dummy defensive scrimmage against Pacific plays and then worked on some of the Irish offensive maneuvers. College of the Pacific will be the Irish opponent here Saturday in the climax to the celebration of Rockne Week.

Bloomington, Ind., Oct. 1 (AP).—Members of the Indiana University football team turned their attention today to building a defense for the running of Jack Crain, star back of the University of Texas eleven, which will oppose the Hoosiers here Saturday. Coach Bo McMillin warned his team to expect some fancy open field running from Crain in addition to a great passing offense.

McMillin shifted Earl Doloway, Elkhart sophomore, from halfback to quarterback, and it was indicated he would get the starting call Saturday.

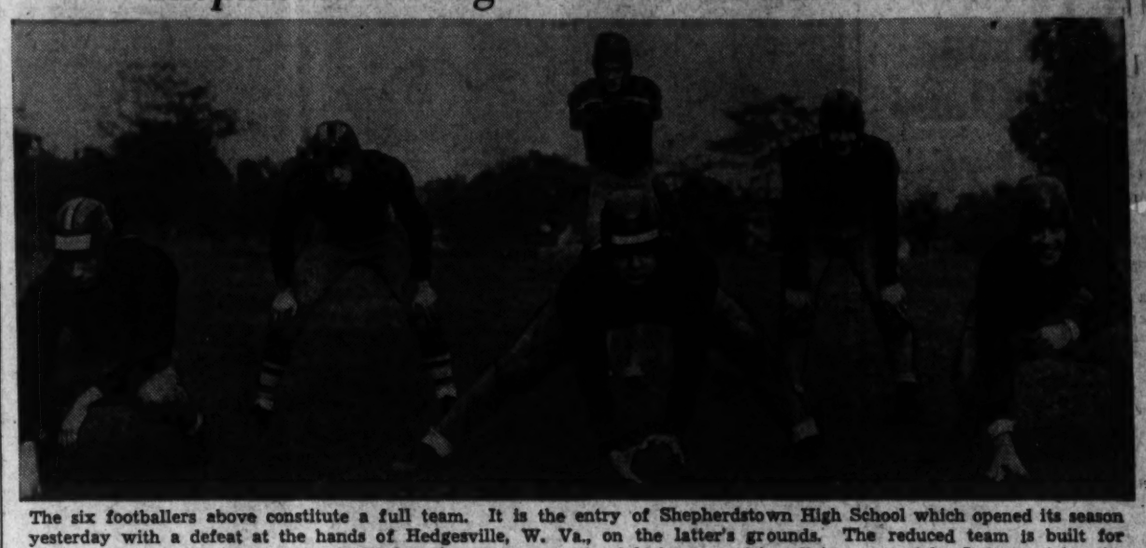
Shepherdstown High Presents Six-Man Football



The six footballers above constitute a full team. It is the entry of Shepherdstown High School which opened its season yesterday with a defeat at the hands of Hedgesville, W. Va., on the latter's grounds. The reduced team is built for high schools which cannot put a regulation 11-man team on the field because of insufficient material. Left to right, the players above are E. Rogers, right end; W. Strider, right halfback; F. S. Walper, fullback; L. Bartlett, center; J. M. Orndorff, quarterback; R. Starry, left end case of power and pitching against pitching and fielding. The Yanks demonstrated that power is the deciding medium in World Series games. Last year here, in the third game, the Cincinnati pitchers held them to five hits. But four of them were home runs. The Tigers are the same kind of ball club.

The Cincinnati ball park was made for us. The shortest fence is the leftfield wall. We've got Hank Greenberg and Rudy York to shoot at that one, and as we demonstrated in Cleveland the other day, when we beat the Indians to clinch the pennant, it only takes one good knock to win a tight ball game.

To repeat, it should be a long series—for Cincinnati is an improved team—and a good one. It should be a battle from the start; the kind of bloodless battle that Americans prefer.

6-Man Football Makes Debut In Va.; Shepherdstown Bows

Martinsburg, W. Va., Oct. 1.—Six-man football, designed particularly to be of service to high schools whose gridiron material is not abundant enough to enable it to maintain an eleven-man team against other large schools, made its formal debut in this section yesterday at Hedgesville, near here, when the host six defeated the Shepherdstown, W. Va., team, 39 to 8.

The experimental game, it was stated after the contest by school officials, solidified a schedule that will include play by six-man teams among Hedgesville, Shepherdstown, Capon Bridge, W. Va., and Lincoln, Va. Coaches and players from the two nonparticipating teams were spectators yesterday.

Spectators viewing the contest, the first of its kind they had ever seen, confessed to some confusion in the first half, but explanations at half-time and discussions of the playing served to make their enjoyment greater in the second half. They found the game productive of wide-open strategy, full of passing, much ball-handling in the backfield and full of surprises.

Play is on an 80-yard-long field as against the 100-yard stretch for the standard teams. The required gain for a first down in four attempts is 15 yards as against the 10 for the larger teams. Old-timers found the game suggestive of the earlier type of play.

George Ludwig, principal of Hedgesville High, who has been primarily active in setting up the league for the smaller teams, said today some other high schools in the section had registered interest in the plans but would not be able to substitute it for the larger game this fall. He added a meeting will be held later of representatives of all those immediately or potentially interested when a league will be formally constituted and plans laid for a larger set-up next year.

The schedule for this fall was announced today as follows:

October 4—Capon Bridge at Shepherdstown.
October 11—Hedgesville at Capon Bridge.
October 11 — Shepherdstown at Lincoln.
October 18—Hedgesville at Shepherdstown.
October 18—Capon Bridge at Lincoln.
October 25—Lincoln at Hedgesville.
October 25 — Shepherdstown at Capon Bridge.
November 1—Capon Bridge at Shepherdstown.
November 1—Lincoln at Shepherdstown.
November 8—Lincoln at Capon Bridge.

May Score Against Irish, Stagg Opines

Stockton, Calif., Oct. 1 (AP).—Foreseeing a game in which "Notre Dame may score freely and we also should score," Coach Alonzo Stagg and 28 members of the College of the Pacific football team entrained today for South Bend, Ind., where they will open their season Saturday.

During three weeks of practice Coach Stagg concentrated almost entirely on the perfection of a new offense. Only one day was given over to defensive drill.

The final workout will be held Friday at Stagg Field, University of Chicago, where Stagg coached for more than 40 years.

Cards Squad Off Today For Detroit

29 Players on Trip To Engage Titans; G. U., G. W. Polish Passing Attacks

By Jack Munhall

The seriousness with which local college football squads view their week-end assignments was manifest yesterday when all four held practice outdoors despite the cold, uncomfortable rain.

At Brookland Catholic University staged its final home drill before entraining at 5 p. m. today for Detroit, there to open its season Friday night with Detroit. Twenty-nine Cardinals will make the trip.

Georgetown, meantime, had its first look at the plays Temple will throw at the Hoyas Friday night in Philadelphia; George Washington held a lengthy forward passing drill on the Polo Field to temper the attack with which the Colonials hope to beat Manhattan at its own game Saturday in New York, and Maryland ran through signals for its Saturday afternoon game with Penn at Franklin Field.

The Georgetown varsity did not experience unexpected trouble stopping Temple plays as run by the freshmen, although Jack Hagerty admitted the frosh hadn't yet mastered the Owl formations.

Of particular interest to Hagerty as well as Assistants Mush Dubofsky and George Murtagh, who scouted Temple last week as it steamrollered what was considered a promising Muhlenberg eleven, 64 to 7, was one Owl maneuver.

A Disconcerting Fullback

This was the continual feinting and faking of the fullback who, Murtagh and Dubofsky say, was wasted on many plays. The fullback, who was usually Jim McIntyre, would start with the snapping of the ball and run to the left or right, parallel with the line of scrimmage. As he ran he would yell for a lateral, which was never thrown him.

ing disconcerting, but he was a

Not only was this fullback's yell-continual nuisance to Muhlenberg because he drew the defensive end out with him and made the end a setup block for the Temple quarterback. Hagerty believes, and with reason, that Temple was holding back for Georgetown some trick plays in which the fullback will play a prominent role. But he can't imagine just what they'll be and that's what makes him curious, if not worried.

The Hoyas-Owls tussle looms as one to be decided in the air. Temple, with an offense speaking in the soft Southern accent of Ray Morris, ringmaster of the famed old S. M. U. Flying Circus, definitely is air minded. And Georgetown, predicts Hagerty, will throw the ball more often Friday night than ever before.

Jules Koshlap, senior left halfback, will be the key passer of the attack and fleet Lou Ghecas, a halfback, and Chris Pavich, sophomore end, probably will be on the receiving end of most of the tosses. Ghecas and Reserve Quarterback Lou Falcone and Al Kull and Frank Dornfeld also will do some flipping.

Pavich, incidentally, has finally won Hagerty's full indorsement as a fine end prospect. Until G. U.'s opener with Roanoke, Hagerty had been afraid that the 165-pound Pavich, though he was very fast and a good pass receiver, might be too small to block out big tackles.

"His work against Roanoke, however, was a revelation," said Hagerty. "The kid is very fast and very smart and he'll do.

With Pavich now listed as a dependable, Georgetown's end situation is much improved, though Hagerty cannot understand the slump of John Lascari, a senior, who had been counted on for plenty of work. Lascari has lost a starting berth to Art Lemke, a much improved junior. The other first-string flank job will be held down by Mike Kosik, a fine punter, who last season won All-America sophomore honors. With erstwhile injured Pete Orlirato replacing John McMahon at guard Georgetown will have its entire regular eleven available for Temple.

The 29 G. U. players making the trip to Detroit are: Hank Brostek, Joe Carrig, Tom Carrig, Jim Conlen, Pete Sachon, George DuBois, Leo Kane, Moe Shulman, Julius Stanges, Gerry Strang, Mike Cherello, Marty Donovan, Bill Griffin, Walter Laukaitis, Casmir Kyscewski, Bill Mulvey, Tim Murname, Jim Nemec, Al Norris, John Schroeder, Huck Hughes, Kenny Blackbird, Joe Boyle, Julius Buckanavage, Bernard Cody, Leo Houck, Jim Mulvihill and Brendon Stynes.

The Cardinals are scheduled to arrive in Detroit tomorrow morning at 8:15 and proceed immediately to Hotel Webster Hall which will be their headquarters. A meeting is scheduled for tomorrow afternoon and a light workout under the lights of Detroit Stadium at 7:30 p. m.

Maryland Offers Coeds Course in Duckpin Bowling

Gonzaga, Devitt Renew Rivalry At Central Stadium Today

Vikings and St. John's Prepare For Night Game Friday; Date Of W.-L. and Western Tiff Changed

By Bill Burnett

Undisturbed by a misleading 20-0 shellacking administered his Gonzaga High football machine by Central in its opener, Coach Orrel Mitchell sends his Purple eleven into its second battle of the year today, a meeting with Devitt at 3:30 at Central stadium.

Despite the enormous improvement shown by Devitt in its inaugural against Woodrow Wilson, Mitchell still confidently expects victory today. His team displayed a devastating ground attack in the Central clash, and with a little more speed can be expected to win most of its remaining games. Few other local clubs boast such a powerful line.

Today's Gonzaga-Devitt battle marks the resumption of a rivalry which seven or eight years ago was the hottest in town. Devitt's attempt at playing major prep teams on an equal footing forced a break in relations, but the school is now back on a high school standard. The game will be the first in five years between the teams.

Baudoin Wins Job

Coach Mitchell's effort to speed up his line-up today will consist of one major change. Buddy Baudoin, whose errant pass accounted for one of Central's pass, will start in place of either Elmer Raba or "Mumbs" Healy, both lettermen. Though dependable on both offense and defense, both are a little less than dazzling afoot. Both will play later in the game.

Meanwhile Central and St. John's elevens were sent through rigid scrimmages yesterday, despite the downpour. Objective was their first night game of the year Friday at Griffith Stadium at 8:15. A crowd of 12,000 was predicted by both Coach Hardy Pierce and Gene Augusterfer.

Pierce, whose Vikings won last year's battle before 9,000 at the ball yard, 21 to 7, said he couldn't expect as wide a margin this year, but would be satisfied with a one-point difference in the score in his favor. Augusterfer, whose club battled Anacostia's tough little eleven to a 7-to-7 stalemate in its opener, also predicted victory, but wants a convincing one.

Roosevelt vs. Eastern

In the afternoon game Friday the annual series of the District of Columbia public schools will be launched with Roosevelt meeting Eastern at Lincoln Park.

The Western and Washington-Lee game, originally set for Friday afternoon, has been shifted to Saturday, at the Arlington gridiron at 3 p. m. Last year the Little Generals were responsible for Western's solitary local defeat as it swept to the interhigh championship, and as W.-L. boasted the only undefeated scholastic record in this vicinity.

Other games on the schoolboy schedule the remainder of the week are: Thursday, Blackstone M. A. at Bullis Prep; Friday, Wilson at St. Albans and Baltimore Friends at Landon; Saturday, G. W. High at Newport News High, Anacostia at Handley (Winchester, Va.) High and Tech at Episcopal.

Gosnell Five Sets Pin Mark At Clarendon

Records crashed last night at Clarendon Bowling Center as the Clarendon Commercial A League rolled its fourth session of the year. Hexson, C. & P. Telephone, knifed the alley for a high individual game of 148 while Al Remson, Gosnell Realtors, came within two pins of making the coveted 400 set. The Gosnell Realtors quintet set a team game record with 593 while Furniture, Inc., not to be outdone, crashed the pins for a record 1,713 for set.

The Buckingham Athletic Association League resumed play with Bischoff, Team No. 2, and Gerber, his teammate, taking high individual game and set laurels with 155 and 378, respectively. Bischoff and Gerber led their quintet to a high team set mark of 1,696 and went on to take all three games from their opponent. In the ladies' division, Mrs. Smith, Team No. 2, bowled high individual game and set of 112-293 to lead the femmes for the night.

Brookland

The last-place Calvert five of the Diamond Cab League took the leading Restaurant team for the odd game last night to come out of bottom position. Oliff, Hotels, took individual game honors with 140, while Fredette, Shoreham, rolled a high set of 374.

Recreation

The two Elks Leagues, men's and women's, bowled last night with Waldrop, Esquires, taking all individual honors for high game and set with 138-383. The Charity team bowled high team game with 590 while the Esquires went ahead for set with 1,606. The Esquires, Entertainment, Justice and Band quintets won all three of their games. In the ladies division Charlotte Skinner repeated by rolling high game and set of 126-300 while the Cardinals took team laurels with 444-1,279.

Maryland Adds Bowling to Coed Course

64 Girls Enrolled For Duckpin Lessons; Study to Be a Major

If you should happen to overhear a couple of lovely University of Maryland coeds talking about splits and breaks they are not referring to skirts and fingernails but about the new course in bowling offered by the university's physical education department this year.

Sixty-four sophomore and freshmen girls lined up along the foul line at the College Park Bowling Alleys yesterday afternoon to be initiated into the mysteries of the duckpin sport. They will meet twice a week for a one-hour period of instruction and practice under the direction of Miss Kathryn Terhune, physical education instructor.

Miss Terhune, former Maryland coed herself, began the teaching of bowling as a physical education course last year while a member of the faculty of Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School. She reported such success with the sport that it was added to the curriculum at Maryland this year.

Costs 40 Cents a Week

Last year an attempt was made to use bowling as one phase of the co-recreational course in the women's physical education college, according to Miss Gwendolyn Drew, head of the department, but it was not accorded the status of a major subject.

The girls who register for the course agree to pay 40 cents a week to the bowling proprietor, which amounts to 10 cents a game, the university not handling any of the money.

The entire upper floor of the alleys are taken over by the girls who roll four to an alley. No attempt is to be made to keep the sessions private, Miss Terhune said, as the idea of the course is to give the girls a taste of actual rolling conditions before a crowd of onlookers.

Girls will be graded on the improvement shown in bowling form and scores, not necessarily on high scores alone. Each girl will have an individual score card on which her weekly progress will be shown. From these cards will be obtained the information on which to base the grades.

In order to give the girls a complete picture of what happens when the ball strikes the pins, they will be given an opportunity to stand near the pits and observe the collision at close range.

The girls will be started on straight-line bowling, Miss Terhune said, later being shown how to bowl across the alleys and throw curves. After the student pin-spillers have shown the ability to hit the mass of pins they will be shown how to make the various spare breaks and be given practice shooting at them.

Miss Terhune intends to invite leading bowlers to put on exhibitions for the girls after they have learned enough to appreciate the niceties of the art of spilling pins. In her classes at Bethesda last year she said that Ida Simmons, No. 1 feminine bowler of the country, helped her in no small manner in demonstrating technique to the students.

The United States Polo Association has given its official approval of the match, which was originally plotted by members of the Foxcroft Alumni Association, now living in London. Miss Charlotte Noland, head of the Middleburg (Va.) girls' school, has made further preparations, in conjunction with Mrs. George Angus Garrett, local Bundles for Britain committee chairman.

The eight players are making the trip at their own expense, for most of them have played in England during the international games.

Tickets for the match, priced at $1, $3 and $5, are on sale at the American Automobile Association, Keystone Auto Club, all leading hotels and at the Bundles for Britain headquarters at 1331 Connecticut avenue. They can also be bought at the ticket office at Potomac Park prior to game time Sunday.

Salaminia Captures 70th Ladies Handicap at Belmont

Pretty Pet Beaten by Half Length

Winner Pays $22.30 After Great Stretch Drive; Favorites Undergo Poor Day

By the Associated Press

Belmont Park, N. Y., Oct. 1.—The seventieth running of the Ladies' Handicap gave another scrambling to the fillies and mares situation here today. Hal Price Headley's 3-year-old daughter of Man O'War, Salaminia, showed her appreciation of an advantage in the weights and scored a half-length triumph to take down the $12,250 first money. John C. Clark's Pretty Pet was second by another half-length over William DuPont, jr.'s Fairy Chant, sixth straight losing choice of the day. Equitable, coupled with the winner, was fourth in the field of 12.

The Headley entry paid $22.30. Salaminia, recently fourth in Fairy Chant's Beldame Handicap but winner of Saratoga's Alabama Stakes, ran the mile and a half in 2:30 under Don Meade, who scored a double.

It was announced after the race that Salaminia, Equitable and Fairy Chant would be starters in the $50,000 added, 2¼-mile New York Handicap Saturday. Only 6,992 fans braved the cold wind and dampness to see today's program of seven races.

Fairy Chant, generally rated tops among the weaker sex, was back in tenth place most of the long journey. She staged one of her gallant stretch rushes but could not make the grade in the closing strides.

Dotted Swiss stole a wide early lead, with Shine O'Night, True Call and Salaminia being rated behind her. True Call went into a narrow lead at the far turn, only to weaken later. Salaminia drove into command in the stretch and lasted under one of Meade's strongest rides. Pretty Pet, like Fairy Chant, made up a lot of ground to become the contender in the home lane, but neither she nor Fairy Chant could make Salaminia falter.

Alfred Vanderbilt, president of Belmont, presented Owner Headley with a piece of plate after the running.

Lyne Elevated, To Head Jones' Bond Division

Former Army Major Is Veteran in D. C. Investment Circles

Richard G. Lyne, veteran of 20 years in the investment business here and in New York, has been named manager of the bond department of Robert C. Jones & Co., local investment bankers.

MR. LYNE

A major during the World War and a graduate of Virginia Military Institute, Mr. Lyne formerly was manager of the local office of the First Boston Corporation.

Robert C. Jones also announced yesterday that the company of which he is head has installed a private wire to Hirsch, Lilienthal & Co., members of the New York Stock Exchange. Mr. Jones revealed that J. Newton Brewer, jr., of his firm, has been elected to membership in the Washington Stock Exchange. Prior to joining the Jones firm, Mr. Brewer was an assistant national bank examiner. Mr. Jones will retain his membership on the local exchange.

D. C. "Alumni" Make Good

H. Randolph Maddox, former commercial superintendent in Washington of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., has been named general commercial manager of the Baltimore office, it was learned here yesterday. Mr. Maddox formerly was assistant general commercial engineer.

He received his start in Washington where he entered the service of the telephone company in 1921 as a student engineer after his graduation from Lehigh University. Another "alumnus" of the Washington telephone company, W. T. Bannerman, jr., was promoted to commercial manager of the Baltimore district. He left Washington in 1929.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Oct. 1 (AP).—Reports of export inquiry by Russia and Portugal for Canadian wheat, strength in securities and a better demand from mills boosted wheat prices as much as a cent a bushel at times today, but profit taking and pressure from longs in the final hour erased most of the gains. Closing prices were ¼ to ½ cent off for December wheat, while the deferred positions were unchanged from yesterday's close.

The early advance brought prices to the highest level since last June for the nearby delivery and to new seasonal highs for May and July. Reports of favorable weather conditions in most of the winter wheat belt, with greening fields being pastured in some sections, contributed to the weakness of the July contract.

Final wheat prices were unchanged to ½ cent lower than Monday's close. December, 82¼@82¾; May, 85¾@86; July, 80¼; oats were unchanged to ½ off; rye unchanged to ⅜ lower, and soy beans unchanged to ¼ higher.

Exchange Markets

New York, Oct. 1 (AP).—Demand for Swiss francs to repatriate war-scared capital sent the rate up 6/100 of a cent to 23.01 United States cents today, highest price of the year.

Foreign money dealers said a minor panic had developed as Swiss corporations transferred balances out of the United States on the theory loss of the neutral nation's independence would result in the blocking of foreign-held balances. The companies desired to avoid the loss of working capital in such fashion.

Bankers pointed out the United States had blocked money held here by European countries taken over by Germany.

The Canadian dollar failed to hold a gain of 1 cent and ended ⅛ lower at 85⅝ United States cents. Free sterling dipped 1½ cents to $4.03¾.

Closing rates follow (Great Britain in dollars, others in cents.)

Official Canadian control board rates for U. S. Dollars: Buying 10 per cent premium, selling 11 per cent premium, equivalent to discounts on Canadian dollars in New York of buying 9.91 per cent, selling 9.09 per cent.

Canadian dollar in New York open market 14¼ per cent discount, or 86.75 U. S. cents.

$135,000,000 Bond Offerings Soon To Be Marketed

New York, Oct. 1 (AP).—Two corporate bond issues totaling more than $135,000,000 are being prepared for early offering in the securities market, Wall Street investment circles reported today.

Largest of the expected transactions involved $108,000,000 of Southern California Edison Bonds to refund outstanding 3¾s. The new securities were scheduled to carry a 3 per cent rate, banking circles said.

A proposed issue of $27,300,000 of 3½ per cent bonds of the New York Connecting Railroad Co. was reported in the hands of Morgan Stanley & Co. as head of a syndicate which would include about 60 investment firms. Proceeds of the sale, it was indicated, would be used to refund outstanding 4½ and 5 per cent bonds.

Capital Banks Put 109 Million In U. S. Bonds

25% of Resources Invested in Low Yield Government Liens

United States bond holdings of the 22 insured commercial banks in the District of Columbia are approximately 25 per cent of total resources, a survey by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation revealed last night.

As of June 29, 1940, local banks listed investments in direct and guaranteed obligations of the Government at $109,461,000. Other securities totaled $25,488,000.

As of the same date, resources of the 22 banks totaled $436,836,000. The high ratio of United States bond holdings to resources indicates the exceptional liquidity of local banks, informed financial quarters here commented. It also is an indication of the scarcity of profitable and secure investment outlets, it was pointed out.

Deposits in the insured banks were listed as $384,677,000. Demand deposits of the latest call date amounted to $265,811,000 and time deposits totaled $118,866,000.

Loans and discounts of the reporting banks amounted to $121,369,000, an increase of $16,675,000 over the June 30, 1939, total.

Loans and discounts of the 13,480 insured commercial banks throughout the country totaled $17,014,000,000, an increase of $974,000,000, or 6 per cent over the amount reported June 30, 1939. Deposits increased from the $52,327,000,000 reported the previous year to $58,425,000,000, the highest figure since inauguration of deposit insurance, the survey showed.

Morgan Boosts Bond Holdings

New York, Oct. 1 (AP).—J. P. Morgan & Co. increased its holdings of Government bonds by nearly $40,000,000 in the three months from June to September, the condition statement of the bank showed today. Total assets increased by better than $11,000,000.

Holdings of Government securities on September 30 amounted to $377,872,016, compared with $338,346,236 on June 29. Assets aggregated $712,972,715, against $701,960,194 three months earlier. Total deposits were $664,010,381, compared with $650,499,911 at the end of June.

Rails Seen Prepared For Peace or War

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 1—Frederick E. Williamson, president of the New York Central Railroad, assured a World's Fair audience today that the railroads of the United States "are ready to meet any situation that now can be foreseen, in either peace or war."

Concerning the preparedness program and basing his estimates on an army of 3,000,000 men, Williamson said: "To maintain all this defense activity for both army and navy would require only an average rail movement of a little over 25,000 cars a week, or 4 per cent of the average weekly loadings in 1939."

Va. Bankers to Meet

Front Royal, Va., Oct. 1—The Virginia Bankers Association, group three, headed by Frank S. Driver of Staunton, chairman, will meet here Oct. 13.

Sugar Futures

New York, Oct. 1 (AP).—Domestic sugar futures pushed ahead as much as 3 points today before profit taking intervened. Final prices were unchanged to 1 up on turnover of 11,000 tons.

Bullish factors included firmness in raw and refined sugar, expectations of early extension of the quota system, and concern over Philippine supplies should the Far Eastern conflict broaden.

The world list advanced 2½ to 3 points on sales of 6,700 tons: December *.78½, March *.83½. Speculative demand was encouraged by fears of disruption of Far Eastern shipments. No. 3 range follows:

Boston, Oct. 1 (AP) (United States Department of Agriculture).—Fine territory wools were having a fairly strong demand today. Graded French combins fine territory wools were bringing 92 to 95 cents, scoured basis. Fine territory wools in original bags were bringing 92 to 94 cents for good French combins lengths. Twelve months Texas wools were bringing 90 to 95 cents, scoured basis.

The Market

By C. Norman Stabler
A Special Correspondent.

New York, Oct. 1.—The stock market advanced briskly in early dealings today and at its best was within a minor fraction of the high of last week. It failed to break through and later gave up a good portion of its advance when some traders took profits. A somewhat similar course was followed in other security markets and on some of the commodity boards, so that price changes at the close were not of a sensational variety.

The stock average was up 0.55 point at the close, and a number of active leaders retained gains of 1 to 3 points. The day's volume, thanks to heavy trading near the opening, amounted to 807,100 shares, the largest since September 23.

Brokers remained cautious in their advice, and many felt there must be a breaking up of the old highs on volume before we can be assured that the list has definitely reversed its trend. Two groups of stocks broke through their September highs today, which in turn were the highs since May. These groups were the equipments and the motors.

Steels led the advance in the war shares. With many mills at capacity and no indications of a letup in new orders, investors regarded the higher tax rates as something to consider later. United States Steel closed up 1¾, Bethlehem 1⅝, and Republic a major fraction.

General Motors was the day's most active stock, gaining ⅝, while Chrysler added a point.

Preferreds traded in at the inactive post continued to attract attention, the best gain today coming in General Steel Casting preferred, which jumped 5¼ to a new high. Pressed Steel Car second preferred was up 3¾, and there was a long list of preferred up 1 to 3 points.

Shipping shares, chemicals and rails were among the other groups popular with investors.

Commodities followed a course somewhat similar to that of stocks but lost more heavily on the afternoon sell-off. Wheat, for instance, after adding about a cent, ran into heavy profit taking and the close was unchanged to ⅛ cent a bushel lower. Cotton met hedge selling and closed unchanged to a point lower. Sugar, coffee, copper, rubber and silk were among the futures markets that were strong.

Domestic bonds were strong today, while foreign dollar obligations resumed their downward trend. United States Treasury obligations made fractional progress. Trading in all bonds exceeded $9,000,000, and thus approached the normal level.

Inquiry for railroad bonds of the speculative classifications seemed to wax steadily, while offerings were scarce. International Telephone bonds and the local communications issues held around previous figures.

Italian bonds were weak through lack of interest on Milan and Rome obligations and several corporate issues. Italians 7s were nearly 3 points down. The Japanese government issues improved, but municipal and power bonds of Japanese origin were highly uncertain. The German group was generally soft. Australians took a downward course, but Canadian issues improved. Latin-American bonds drifted lower.

The Post Radio Time Table

1:15 p. m., WOL—The 1940 World Series is aired exclusively over the Mutual network, again by Bob Elson and Red Barber, with Mel Allen taking over between innings for color angles.

2, WMAL—A new dramatic series on child care, Raising a President makes its bow over the Blue network with an episode titled "Timothy Defends His Country."

7:15, WJSV—Washington's Mrs. C. D. Ferguson composed both music and lyrics to "For One Lovely Moment," a ballad which has been heard over the air before and which Lanny Ross has chosen for his quarter-hour tonight.

8, WMAL—Last week's one three-way tie and one two-way tie brings back the same alignment to Quiz Kids: Gerard Darrow, 8; Van Dyke Tiers, 13; Cynthia Cline, 14; Jack Lucal, 13, and Geraldine Hamburg, 14.

8:15, WOL—George Arliss plays Disraeli again, this time in Dizzy's London with BBC piping the actor to the Mutual network.

9, WJSV—"Drive a nail through the calendar for Wednesday, October 2!" quoth Fred Allen. He would remind the world that on October 2, 1452 King Richard II was born; that in 1700 Charles II of Spain bequeathed his throne to Philip of Anjou. And now October 2, 1940, Fred Allen brings his Mighty Allen Art players back to the networks!

9:30, WMAL—Wendell L. Willkie talks from Cleveland, the second of three Blue network talks this week. He will be heard tomorrow evening at 9 on this station, speaking in Pittsburgh on labor problems.

10:20, WJSV—Dr. Arnulfo Arias, President of Panama, repeats a portion of his inaugural address in English for the benefit of the United States, where he received a Harvard medical degree.

The Columbia Broadcasting System's statisticians have been busily at work. They've made survey after survey at radio station after radio station in State after State and done some checking and rechecking.

As a modest little result they've figured out that when Fred Allen makes his fall debut tonight—over WJSV at 9 o'clock—there'll only be 23,000,000 persons listening to him.

We just mention this in passing because we'd hate to have you miss getting a seat on such an exclusive bandwagon, if you hadn't already made your reservations.

Featured as usual with Fred in the hour-long "Star Theater," are Tenor Kenny Baker, Portland Hoffa, the mad by mighty Allen Art Players and Al Goodman's Orchestra. Jimmy Wallington and Larry Elliott, an up-and-coming WJSV alumnus, handle the announcing stint.

It isn't very exclusive information to inform you that Fred Allen is America's No. 1 puncturer of ponderous pretense and probably the readiest master of the quick quip in radio. Unlike most radio shows, Allen's always has to be so constructed that there's about ten milutes extra allowed for the actual performance as against the rehearsal time—the laughs of the studio audience being so frequent and prolonged.

We only hope that too many people don't listen in though. We'd hate to have those Columbia statisticians proved wrong.

Japan Sees Challenge To U. S. in Pact

Hull's Charge Line-up Long Has Existed Wins Corroboration

Striking corroboration of Secretary of State Hull's charge that the German-Italian-Japanese alignment existed in fact long before the three powers announced their new alliance has reached Washington.

Consisting of Tokyo press comment not transmitted to America previously, the evidence reveals, also, the sweeping challenge to America which Japanese undertake to read into the alliance. Some observers, at the same time, saw in the comment indications of trepidation lest the United States be less affected by the challenge than was anticipated.

Corroboration was seen, also, of the view that a chief aim of the Hitler-inspired pact was to keep American attention so diverted to the Pacific that less aid from this country might reach Britain.

Anticomintern Was Forerunner

Some of the press observations follow:

Nichi Nichi—The anticomintern pact was a forerunner of the present treaty, although a long view reveals the inevitability of complete cooperation between Japan, Germany and Italy, with anticommunism only one motive in the first agreement. Now perfect accord has been reached by the three nations i establishing a new order freeing the world from Anglo-Saxon oppression. The United States may lead the Anglo-Saxon races in resisting the new order. The three nations must take a determined stand but will use arms only as a last resort.

Kokumin—The common aims of Japan, Germany and Italy long have been evident. Their identical policies for eradicating liberalism and individualism were shown in Japan's action in the Manchuria incident and German-Italian destruction of the Verrsailles conditions. Feeling even exists that the treaty should have been made sooner. Imperial sanction removes all negative attitudes or opposition previously existent in Japan.

Yomiuri—The United States policy appears unchanged and she may enter the war. Does the United States, realizing present conditions in the Pacific and the Atlantic, have the determination to rise in opposition? . . . Japan, having attained a more powerful world position must not rest on the treaty but must unite to accomplish the gigantic task ahead.

Interference Held Intolerable

Asahi—Parallel efforts to build a new order in East Asia and Europe have now reached the development where it is necessary to combine against united efforts of the guardians of the old order, whose pressure and interference now are intolerable.

Hochi—The article concerning Soviet Russia is profoundly significant. Japan must be prepared to conquer future difficulties. It is necessary to unite nationally to make a concentrated effort to accomplish a great objective.

D. C. Utility Faces Gas Quiz

The Public Utilities Commission yesterday disclosed that it soon will have before it an exhaustive report on the possibilities of greater use of natural gas in Washington as an investigation of the Washington Gas Light Co. and other public utilities was called for in Congress.

Representative McArdle (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, introduced a resolution proposing that five members of the House District Committee be appointed by the Speaker to determine why more natural gas is not used and whether any economies might be effected by its substitution for manufactured gas.

The resolution included the Potomac Electric Power Co. and the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. in the proposed inquiry because of rates charged them by the gas company.

A series of "whereases" in the resolution stated that there have been 'numerous widespread concern about the burdensome charges" for gas in Washington, and suggested that use of natural gas would bring down the rates.

Richmond B. Keech, vice chairman of the commission, said that the commission initiated an investigation of available natural gas last February and that a complete report is expected within a few weeks from Frank Fisher, a commission engineer.

Exemption Asked For Stutterers

New York, Oct. 1 (AP).—Exemption of the more than 1,000,000 stutterers from active military duty has been recommended to the draft administration board by Dr. James Sonnett Greene, medical director of the National Hospital for Speech Disorders.

"Under the normal pressures of everyday life," Dr. Greene wrote to Lieut. Col. Lewis B. Hershey, acting director of the board, "the stutterer becomes so emotional and nervously disorganized that in many cases he cannot hold employment. Greater strain, such as active military duty imposes, would result in complete breakdown."
